Gov. Coleman
Of Mississippi

Gov. James P. Coleman of Mississippi, who is unalterably and completely opposed to desegregation of the public school, has done the nation and the South a great service by being what he is—an honest man.

In a public interview Gov. Coleman is quoted as saying:

1. He doesn't necessarily "accept" the Supreme Court's decision, but "it is the law."

2. As an "abstract principle of government," he accepts the statement of Gov. LeRoy Collins of Florida that the country would fall into chaos if citizens could disregard Supreme Court decisions with which they disagree.

This position is important because it so sharply contrasts with the hysterical, irresponsible, almost incredibly vicious, often vile attacks on the Supreme Court and the government from his neighboring states. Gov. Coleman is the only "cotton South" political leader with the political courage and character to state that the court's decisions are the law. Gov. Collins has been the target of vilification and charges of other Deep South states.

No Desegregation

Gov. Coleman has no idea of allowing desegregation to take place in his state schools. He is as much opposed as his neighbors. But he is a governor who is first of all loyal to his people, his country and its institutions.

No Communist has been as subversive of the institutions of the United States as have some of those extremist governors, politicians and writers who have persuaded the people of their states that the Supreme Court decisions are not, when made a court order, "the law."

It is, of course, proper and possible strongly to dissent, to disagree and to criticize.

But to launch an attack on the legality and authority of the court itself as an institution is a subversive policy which assists communism more than anything the Communists themselves have been able to do.

Gov. Coleman is as determined as any other to resist, by all legal means, even to closing the public schools. But he is no vile-mouthed demagogue, willing to subvert the national interests to advance his own politics. He knows he does not need to do so. He has told his people the truth. The feist-like pack of extremists of bombs and violence will snap and snarl at him. But he knows what to do about such feists.

The court decision is law . . . and for states to obey some court rules and defy others means anarchy. Gov. Coleman has helped clear the air by saying so.

The Situation

This now seems to be the situation:

At least four states, Mississippi among them, will close their schools when, and if, confronted with a court order to desegregate even on a token-basis beginning, such as some states have done. They will not accept the decision. This is entirely legal. Neither the court nor the government can close a school. The states, themselves, and only the states, can choose to do that when confronted with a notice from the court.

Nor can, or will, the federal court prohibit private schools. Private corporations or individuals may start an unlimited number of them. A state, if under court order, cannot legally allow use of a public building or pay out state funds. But those persons or organizations which are willing to pay for them may conduct as many private institutions as they wish. A great many churches are planning to do this no matter what the outcome.

In its latest decision the Supreme Court sought to make clear its position. It is that under its interpretation of the equal-protection-of-the-law provisions of the 14th amendment, the Negro is established as being as much a citizen as anyone else. Therefore, says the court, its ruling is concerned with one thing—and one thing only. There must be no discrimination between citizens or the children of citizens. States which disagree are at complete liberty to do so. The cost is tragic. But freedom to refuse the court's order by closing the schools is not denied.

State Promises To Prove Anjette Deserves Chair

By CELESTINE SIBLEY
Constitution Staff Writer

MACON—The State of Georgia promised a Bibb County jury Tuesday it would unfold a chilling tale of malice and greed which will render inevitable a verdict of death in the electric chair for Anjette Donovan Lyles.

The plump, cameo-faced widow is a woman who fed four unsuspecting people who loved her arsenic-laden ant poison "out of hate and out of greed," talked of wills and insurance at the bedside of her dying husbands and laughed outright when her dying child fought off imaginary snakes and bugs in an oxygen tent, special prosecutor Charles Adams said.

"These crimes are a premeditated, so brutal that if we prove them to your satisfaction there can be only one verdict," Adams told the jury. "We will ask the death penalty."

STARTS ROLLING

The State's case actually started rolling after the lunch-time recess when five of the expected 50 witnesses were placed on the stand. The surprise of the session was tall, handsome D. K. Gabbart Jr., of El Paso, Tex., brother of Anjette's second husband and alleged second victim, Joe Neal Gabbart.

Gabbart struck a poignant note by telling how he identified the body of his brother when it was exhumed in Georgia and moved to Texas and later disinterred again for checks on arsenic poisoning. A small white Bible into which his mother had written a passage of scripture and a little model airplane had been placed in the coffin when it was buried in Texas and was still there when it was disinterred, Gabbart said.

The witness said his mother had written the passage of John 14, beginning "Let not your heart be troubled" and placed it in the coffin with her son when he was buried in Texas. By coincidence, Anjette has held a small white Bible in her hand throughout the trial.

OTHERS HEARD

The other four witnesses heard Tuesday afternoon were Officer David Banks of the Macon Police Department and A. R. King Jr., of a local vault company who were present when the bodies of three of the poisoning victims were disinterred; Hoke Smith, mortician, who testified that he embalmed three of the victims and did not use arsenic in the embalming fluid; and Dr. Leonard H. Campbell, Bibb County medical examiner, who examined Marcia Lyles shortly before her death and performed a post mortem.

Dr. Campbell said he tapped the bone marrow of little Marcia when she was ill in an effort to determine the cause of her illness.

Georgia's Girls Prettiest, Say Soviet Visitors

WASHINGTON (AP)—Georgia has won supporters in the Soviet Union for its claim of having beautiful women.

A delegation of six Russian farm experts, completing a month-long tour of farming areas of the East, Midwest and South, told their American guides that Georgia girls were the prettiest they had seen on their visit.

In this country under an exchange arrangement, the Russians said they had found Americans "cordial, sociable, very hospitable, and gifted with a great deal of humor."

Crazed Buck Gores Guide in Okefenokee

Constitution State News Service

WAYCROSS—A veteran Okefenokee Swamp Park guide was severely injured Tuesday by a furious eight-point buck.

Lint Lucas, who also serves as caretaker for animals in Okefenokee Swamp Park, was feeding a deer in a corral when a 300-pound buck lowered his antlers and charged.

Swamp park manager Liston Elkins said Lucas barely escaped with his life.

Lucas grabbed the buck and they went down together. The struggle continued for about 15 minutes. Several other park attendants raced into the corral to hold the fighting buck until the guide freed himself.

Faubus Accuses U.S. Of Tax Persecution

By CLAUDE SITTON
(Copyright 1958 by The New York Times Co.)

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—Gov. Orval E. Faubus accused the U.S. Internal Revenue Service Tuesday of seeking to persecute him because of his role in the school desegregation controversy.

The governor, who paid taxes on a total taxable income of $22,000 for 1954 through 1956, contended that the agency had told him that he owed levies on another $103,500 for the three-year period.

However, Curtis R. Mathis, district director of the agency in Arkansas, called it all a big mistake. He said agent Lewis D. Crenshaw, who has worked with the agency since 1941, was "responsible for the whole, cotton-picking mess."

Crenshaw was not available for comment. Mathis said the agent had erred in adjusting the governor's taxable income to include use of the official residence, funds for its maintenance and household servants employed there by the state.

The director also conceded that probably no tax was due on an automobile Faubus received as a gift in 1954.

The governor issued a statement saying that if he was required to pay additional levies on these items alone, his $10,000 annual salary would "be far insufficient to pay my personal income tax each year . . . and a great deal of humor."

Phone Rings the Way To a Wedding Ring

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Ralph Smith, 23, looked up from repairing an office telephone one day last February and saw that secretary Kay Yates, 21, was blonde and pretty. Kay looked down and saw that Ralph had brown hair and blue eyes.

Ralph fixed the phone and told Kay he'd give her a ring to make sure it was okay.

One ring led to another and they began seeing each other. He'll put a wedding ring on her finger Oct. 18.

Pope Slips In Battle For Life

Pulse, Fever Rise
After Good Day

From Wire Reports

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy—Pope Pius XII Tuesday night suffered a "disturbing" increase in his pulse rate, temperature and blood pressure in his valiant struggle for life.

The 82-year-old pontiff's rate of breathing quickened during the day and a Vatican press spokesman said he was experiencing considerable difficulty with a blockage of the urinary tract.

The announcement by the spokesman underlined earlier warnings by physicians that the Pope still was "gravely ill," although he had made remarkable progress through the day and had regained some control of speech and memory faculties paralyzed by a stroke Monday morning.

His daytime condition until 6 p.m. was described as "satisfactory" in a medical bulletin, and he took food and discussed church business.

Checks of his temperature, pulse and blood pressure then showed "disturbing" signs, the spokesman said.

The Pope was reported in a delirium Tuesday night.

SUMMER RESIDENCE

In answer to an erroneous roundabout report that he had died, the switchboard operator at his summer residence said at 2:30 a.m. "The report that the Pope is dead is not true."

Medical experts, members of his family and a pontifical noble guard maintained a solemn vigil at the sick room.

The last medical bulletin at 6 p.m. Tuesday said the Pope had recovered from a coma and partial paralysis that attended the stroke.

VATICAN OFFICIAL

Several hours later a Vatican official said flatly the condition of the Pope had worsened. He would give no details.

"I stick by what I said," was his only reply to questions.

A doctor close to the situation said the Pope was in worse condition than the 6 p.m. bulletin indicated.

This source said the pontiff actually was still afflicted with upper body paralysis affecting his upper body, face and speech.

BLOOD PRESSURE

The Vatican spokesman said the Pope's blood pressure was about 135 over 80 Tuesday night compared with 130 over 85 earlier in the day. His normal blood pressure was given as 120 over 85.

The pulse rate, which increased in the afternoon from 82 to 102 was reported to have increased further Tuesday night.

The Pope had a 99.5-degree temperature during the night but it went down to a normal 98.6 Tuesday morning.

Tuesday night his temperature was up again to 99.7 degrees.

The blockage of the urinary tract, which had plagued the Pontiff during the touch-and-go hours Monday continued to plague him.

Bridge Fall Kills 30

MEDELLIN, Colombia (AP)—Thirty persons were killed Tuesday when a bridge collapsed, plunging a bus into the Caldesa River in western Colombia.

A Decatur mortician missing since Saturday has been found slain and robbed near Van Buren, Ark., police said.

The body of Virgil Glenn Gray, 48, of 133 Lockwood Ter., Decatur, was found sprawled beside a logging road in the Ozark National Forest.

Officers said Gray had been beaten and shot through the left temple. They said heavy powder burns indicated the .32-caliber death bullet had been fired at point-blank range.

Two Bethany officers, Lester and Chester Longacre, brothers, said Ledford and his blonde companion were both armed. They said Ledford had a .38-caliber pistol stuck in his belt, while his companion had a .32-caliber automatic in her purse. The Longacres, alerted for the car by a Oklahoma highway patrol broadcast, said they confronted the man and woman with drawn shotgun and pistol. They said neither offered resistance.

The woman was not identified immediately. Identification records show Ledford, a native of Murray County, Ga., was given a conditional release from the penitentiary on Sept. 30.

The family of Gray said he was positively identified by William Billy Flowers, 18, of Liburn, who worked with him at the Wages

Don't Shell Isles Again, Reds Told

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles told the Chinese Communists Tuesday they will be condemned by all the free world if they resume their "brutal" attack on the Quemoy Islands.

He made the statement shortly after the State Department accused Red China of committing a "provocative act" by sending eight war planes over the Nationalist-held offshore islands during the temporary cease-fire there.

ENDS VACATION

Dulles, returning from a five-day vacation at his Lake Ontario retreat, did not speculate on the Peiping government's motives in temporarily suspending their attack. Some officials thought it might be a maneuver to throw blame on the United States when or if the bombardment is resumed.

In a statement which he read immediately after his plane landed at Washington's National Airport, Dulles said:

"The Chinese Communists, after having brutally and incessantly bombed Quemoy for over six weeks, now say they will be humanitarian and peace for one week. It is not easy to evaluate that statement."

"But at least for the moment there is a cessation of the bombing. This, the United States has been vigorously seeking. And the development assures world-wide condemnation of the Chinese Communists if they again resume the fighting."

NOT GUESSING

Asked why he thought the Communists had halted their attack, he said he was "not guessing at the moment." He went directly from the airport to the State Department for conferences with Undersecretary of State Christian A. Herter and Assistant Secretary Walter S. Robertson, the department's Far Eastern expert.

The department's charge of "provocation" against Red China was leveled by press officer Lincoln White at a news briefing.

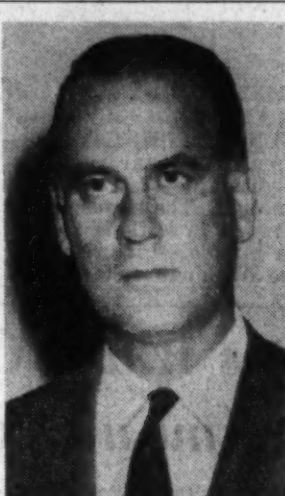

Watson, Griffin Win East Point Seats in Runoff

With approximately one-third of the registered voters casting ballots, W. B. (Bill) Griffin and H. B. (Buck) Watson won council seats Tuesday in an East Point runoff Democratic primary.

Griffin, incumbent First Ward councilman, polled 1,553 votes against 540 for Scott Walters, Watson, running against incumbent J. Henry Blair for the Third Ward post, polled 1,107 votes against Blair's 962.

Blair and Griffin were high men in three-man races in the Sept. 10 city primary.

NEW COURT JUSTICE
Judge Potter Stewart

Ike Names Ohioan to High Court

By ANTHONY LEWIS

(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON—Potter Stewart of Cincinnati, a judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals since 1954, was named to the Supreme Court Tuesday by President Eisenhower.

Judge Stewart is 43, is a Republican, an honors graduate of Yale College and Yale Law School. He has been serving on the court of appeals for the sixth circuit, which covers Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky and Tennessee.

The new justice received a recess appointment from the President. He will take his seat on the high court immediately after Justice Harold H. Burton, whose retirement was announced Monday, steps down next Monday afternoon.

FORMAL NOMINATION

Next January President Eisenhower will have to send a formal nomination of Judge Stewart to the Senate to be confirmed. The initial response to his selection indicates that there should be no great difficulty with confirmation.

The Senior Sen from Ohio, Republican John W. Bricker, indicated through an aide that Judge Stewart will have his strong support. The chairman of the American Bar Association's committee on the federal judiciary, Bernard C. Segal, said the appointment was "excellent."

HANDSOME MAN

The swift choice of a successor to Justice Burton indicated that the White House and the Justice department had some advance warning of Justice Burton's retirement. It was also clear that they wanted to maintain a full bench on the Supreme Court.

News of the appointment came in a surprise press conference called Tuesday afternoon by James Hagerty, the President's press secretary. Reporters filing into his office found a handsome

Meets Jury Deadline for Merit Plan

By WILLIAM M. BATES

State Revenue Commissioner T. V. Williams Sr. Tuesday fired 46 employees and adjusted salaries and positions of more than 100 others in an effort to comply with Merit System regulations.

Williams' action was in keeping with a "solemn promise" that he gave the Fulton County Grand Jury Aug. 30 to bring his department into compliance with the Merit System.

The jury gave Williams 45 days to comply.

Williams said his action "in the main" will bring the Revenue department "nearer to 100 per cent compliance with the Merit System than at any time in the history of the department."

NOT QUALIFIED

The 46 fired employees, Williams said, were not qualified under merit regulations to hold their jobs.

He said most of them were good employees that he hated to lose. Williams said most of them were advised that they would be reinstated if they could meet Merit System requirements.

The 46 will go off the payroll effective at the close of business Wednesday. They were notified of their dismissal by letter.

The fired employees brought to 64 the number who have been discharged by Williams on grounds they are not qualified under merit regulations. He fired 16 two weeks after the grand jury action.

SALARIES ADJUSTED

In addition to the 46 employees fired Tuesday, Williams said salaries of about 100 others were "adjusted up or down" in accordance with merit regulations. Others, he said, had been promoted or demoted in their positions to bring them into compliance.

Williams said most of the remaining employees who were not in compliance with the Merit System "straightened out." But he said

Reds Vow to Match West's Atom Tests

Gromyko Asks U.N. Ban Now, Would Equal U.S.-British Total

By THOMAS J. HAMILTON

(Copyright 1958 by The New York Times Co.)

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—The Soviet Union announced Tuesday that it would continue nuclear test explosions until it had equaled the combined total reached by the United States and Britain.

Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet foreign minister, held a news conference to urge the adoption by the General Assembly of a Soviet resolution calling for the immediate discontinuance of such test explosions.

Gromyko said adoption of the resolution would "promote the success" of East-West negotiations on the establishment of control machinery for the prohibition of nuclear test explosions. These are to begin in Geneva Oct. 31.

LEFT IMPRESSION

Gromyko renewed today the Soviet contention that the negotiations should take place at the foreign ministers' level. He left the impression, however, that the Soviet Union would attend even if, as is generally expected, the United States and Britain refused to send their foreign ministers.

The United States issued a statement Tuesday night expressing the hope that Gromyko's statement did not mean that the Soviet Union "is seeking justification for a U.S.S.R. policy of continuing unrestricted nuclear testing."

The statement reaffirmed the intention of the United States to suspend its own nuclear test explosions on Oct. 31, "provided the Soviet Union does the same," and expressed the hope that the Soviet Union was not trying to evade its acceptance of the United States announcement on Aug. 22 regarding a one-year suspension.

The statement said that it was "up to the Soviet Union now as to whether the tests will be suspended on Oct. 31 or whether they are to continue."

Gromyko made two conflicting statements on the exact type of parity he demanded in nuclear test explosions. In a statement he read at the start of the news conference he said that the Soviet Union had to take into account "the interests of its security" in determining the date when it would stop them. He added:

"The Soviet Union has all grounds to discontinue its tests only after it conducts the same number of such tests as was held by the United States and Britain taken together as allies after the cessation by the Soviet Union of its nuclear weapons tests on March 31 of this year."

FROM THE BEGINNING

Later, however, he told a correspondent that the Soviet Union would continue its tests until they equaled the total number carried out by the United States and Britain "from the beginning" of test explosions.

He said also that if France started nuclear tests, the Soviet total must equal the combined total of the three Western "allies."

According to information made available by official sources on Sept. 18, the United States has conducted a total of 112 tests since the first explosion at Alamogordo, New Mex., in 1945. The United States is believed to have conducted two more since then, besides several that were not announced.

According to these sources, the Soviet total since 1949 is 39, while Britain has conducted 19 since 1952. Regardless of the exact totals, the Soviet demand for parity presumably would allow it to continue nuclear test explosions for a number of years unless an international agreement was reached, in Gromyko's words, to stop them permanently and without conditions.

CORRECT ONE

The Soviet delegation Tuesday night authorized the statement that Gromyko's written remark was the correct one, and that the Soviet Union therefore was merely asking parity in nuclear test explosions since it announced the suspension of test explosions on March 31. The new demand is in line with a year-old Soviet demand for parity on the U.N. Disarmament Commission, so that the number of Soviet-bloc and neutralist members would equal the Western members. The Soviet Union has boycotted the commission for a year because this demand was not fully met.

The Soviet Foreign Minister and his subordinates laughed ironically when a correspondent remarked that the purpose of recent U.S. test explosions was to develop a "clean" bomb.

When he was asked if the purpose of the Soviet tests was to produce a more destructive weapon than the hydrogen bomb, Gromyko replied that this was "very dynamic" and that there was no limit to the possible increase in its destructive power.

Adams Stays On To Help Persons Learn the Ropes

WASHINGTON (AP)—Wilton B. (Jerry) Persons took over Tuesday as President Eisenhower's No. 1 assistant. But Sherman Adams, who resigned the top White House staff job under fire, is staying around for a while to help out.

Adams solemnly looked on from the back of the room as Atty. Gen. William Rogers administered the oath of office to the lean, 62-year-old graying retired major general. Adams didn't stick around to join the line of well-wishers congratulating Persons after the ceremony.

Eisenhower was at the front of the White House conference room beside Persons. After Rogers had administered the oath, the President handed Persons his commission, smiled and said: "Well Jerry, here is a new diploma. This is one of the many capacities in which we have been together."

Persons, a long-time close associate and personal friend of Eisenhower, served with him in the Army. A member of the White House staff since Eisenhower took office in 1953, he has been deputy assistant to the President.

The White House said Adams will stay on until there has been an orderly transition. Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said he didn't know how long that would be.

Adams resigned the $22,500-a-year role of right hand man to the President on Sept. 22 after there was no letup of the continuing criticism of his relations with Boston industrialist Bernard Goldfine, the present-giving millionaire.

Adams insisted he had done no wrong in making inquiries of regulatory agencies about pending Goldfine cases. But he agreed with Republican critics that his actions might hurt the election chances of GOP candidates in next month's elections if he stayed on.

U.S. Surgeons Want Crackdown On 'Hotrod Ambulance Drivers'

CHICAGO (AP)—A committee of the American College of Surgeons called Tuesday for a crackdown on the hotrod-type ambulance driver. They said studies show he injures more of his charges than he helps.

Dr. Preston Wade of New York, chairman of the society's committee on trauma which plugged successfully for safety devices in new cars, said the ambulance driver should go easy on the siren and obey all speed and traffic laws including stop and go lights.

Dr. Sidney Lyttle, Flint, Mich., surgeon who made a survey of 2,500 ambulance patient deliveries to Flint hospitals, said:

"The study showed that 98.2 per cent of the cases would have gotten along just as well if they had been delivered to the hospital by ox cart."

Of the remaining 1.8 per cent of the cases, or 45 cases, that required reasonably swift attention, he went on, nine could have been killed or reduced to permanent invalidism by a rough ambulance ride.

"And none of these 45 patients would have died if there had been an additional half hour delay in bringing them to the hospital," he added.

Committee members presented their views in a news conference on trauma at the ACS's 44th annual clinical meeting.

Wade said Louisiana and Massachusetts have state laws governing the qualifications and performance of ambulance drivers and that the committee believes all states should adopt similar statutes.

Lyttle said the Flint survey failed to uncover a single case where speed would have saved the patient's life.

"What the seriously injured or ill patient needs is a smooth expeditious trip to the hospital not a speeding, rough, weaving ride which can increase the degree of shock with possible fatal results," he said.

The committee sent a resolution to the major auto manufacturers in 1955 requesting they consider installations of seat belts, interior padding, recessed steering wheels, safety door locks and firmly fixed front seats.

True Story

Little Girls Stranded—Who Helps?

"My name is Patsy, and I'm 9 years old." Her voice was small and tired. "This is my sister. Her name is Hannah, and she's going on 7."

The children were shabby and their eyes were big with bewilderment and innocent faith.

They had been on the bus all night, traveling from uncertainty to uncertainty.

Mama had gone away several days ago, and they had not heard from her. They didn't know who put them on the bus in the Mississippi town where they had been living. Patsy thought they were going to some place in North Carolina where Daddy was. He was to meet them in Atlanta. Yes, she knew who he worked for.

Not much to go on. But Travelers Aid, a Community Services agency, found Daddy. He was sorry, he couldn't get off from work to meet the girls in Atlanta.

He hadn't seen them in five years, when he separated from their mother. When their mother deserted them, he sent bus fare for the girls to come to him. That was the best he knew to do. Could Travelers Aid put them on the next bus?

Of course, Travelers Aid could, but meantime the girls were fed and cared for. Daddy was told exactly what time to be at the bus station and was referred to a local child welfare service for help in planning for the youngsters' future.

This thing happened. It is a documented case history. To help youngsters like Patsy and Hannah and other strangers in distress costs $8.67 per person. Give now! Give generously for Community (Chest) Services.

Cowboy Hero Welcomes 220 Newsboys to Fair

Some 200 Atlanta Constitution and Atlanta Journal newsboys representing virtually every section of the state were guests of the Southeastern Fair Tuesday.

The youngsters, winners of a statewide circulation contest, joined thousands of other fair visitors for the sixth day of Georgia's "greatest annual event."

Upon arriving at the fairgrounds Tuesday afternoon, the newsboys were met by movie cowboy star Johnny Mack Brown who also had the entire group as with a team from the University of Florida second and a University of Mississippi team third.

Pete Moody of the University of Georgia was first in individual scoring and Preston Hart, also of Georgia, was second.

In the Hereford show, Circle A Ranch of Sandersville exhibited the grand champion bull while Jo-Su-Li Farms of Colquitt showed the reserve champion bull. Caw-Caw Plantations of Orangeburg, S.C., exhibited the grand champion female of the show while Pleasant Point Plantation of Beaufort, S.C., showed the reserve champion.

Wednesday will be War Veterans Day at the fair and the livestock activity will include Angus and sheep judging.

Missile Officer To Talk at Fair

Lt. Col. Bruce Pierce, executive officer of the Research and Development Division of the Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency at Huntsville, Ala., will be a featured speaker at "War Veteran's Day" Wednesday at the Southeastern Fair.

Col. Pierce will speak on "Guided Missiles in the Army" at 4 p.m. at the fair center.

4-State Army Reserves Merged Into HQ Here

Atlanta was named Tuesday as headquarters for a new organizational setup for Army reserves which replaces the military districts of four states.

Military districts of Georgia, Tennessee, North and South Carolina will be merged into a single corps under the command of Maj. Gen. Frank S. Bowen who has been in command of the Georgia Military District. The new organization will be known as the XII U.S. Army Corps (Reserve).

and the IV Corps will be under the jurisdiction of the Third Army commander.

Maj. Gen. Stanhope B. Mason will command the IV corps.

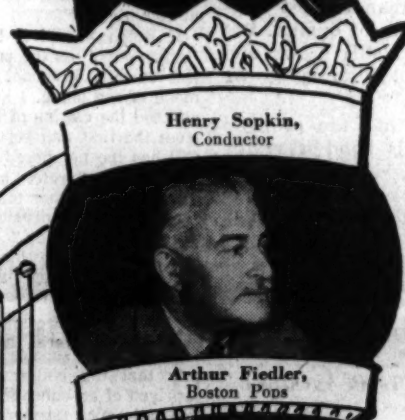

The remaining states of the Third Army Area, Florida, Mississippi and Alabama, will be organized as the IV U.S. Army Corps (Reserve) with headquarters in Birmingham. Both the XII

The changes are part of a program to consolidate subsidiary military districts. The Army said it was designed to improve reserve training. When the reorganization is complete, there will be 14 Army corps in the United States, replacing 49 state military districts in six Army areas.

Good Fiscal Control Is Basic Requisite

Permanent fiscal control agencies in both the legislative and executive branches of state government are among recommendations made to the Georgia Senate committee now studying reorganization of state government for more efficient, economical operations.

The recommendation, made by Page Ingram, a representative of the Council of State Governments, has merit. Since part of the reorganization must be a consolidation of boards and bureaus, adding two more could be justified fully if part of their job consisted of preventing more from mushrooming.

To have maximum value such fiscal control agencies would have to be independent. In other words, they would be useless if set up as mere appendages of the governor's office. Far too many boards, set up by the General Assembly to do legislative bidding, have wound up being owned lock, stock and barrel by the executive department.

Under the present system wherein the governor has so much control over spending—especially of surplus funds—pressures of politics and politicians are rough on state funds. Under such one-man control there's nobody to whom to pass the buck.

Good fiscal control not only entails wise spending of funds on hand but long-range planning to meet long-range goals. Typical example of this is the highway department where so much emphasis has been placed on miles of roads paved with little thought about maintenance. Hand-to-mouth financing invites perpetual crisis.

At any rate, it is good to see the Senate group on the job. There is time to explore many fields between now and January.

The committee, which seems sincere in trying to find ways of carrying out Governor Vandiver's pledges for streamlining and efficiency, has a difficult job. They need expert advice and it's good they are seeking it. Available to them, of course, are facilities of the state university system, professional consultants and leaders not connected with partisan politics.

Surely there is enough ability and wisdom in the state, if used, to set our government course toward the goals we all seek.

The state's income has grown phenomenally in the past few years and the revenue department has become one of its most powerful agencies. Before there are any further hasty tax increases, an earnest attempt should be made to make the best use of available funds. The tax structure must be geared to—as it is limited by—economic growth.

Stakes Are Quite High At World Bank Meeting

In New Delhi, India, Atlanta's Eugene Black, whose mother was a daughter of Henry Grady, famed editor of The Constitution in the late 1800s, is presiding over a momentous meeting of the World Bank.

The bank has before it proposals to enlarge its funds and those of the International Monetary Fund. A third Eisenhower proposal, for a special new agency to assist underdeveloped nations on easy terms, was less warmly received by some of the European nations. Belgium in particular was lukewarm. They fear competition and loss of markets.

But there is reason to believe the World Bank and the International Fund will enlarge their lending capacity. Both have excellent records. No loans are in default.

Prime Minister Nehru, in welcoming the monetary meeting, made an important speech. The struggle today is not, he said, between Communists and anti-Communists. In spite of the difference over method, he said, both worship the same "god of the machine."

The great divide—and the gap grows—is, he said, between the have-not nations "struggling to stay alive," and those with highly developed industrial economies.

Because of this obvious fact, India's Prime Minister urged the finance ministers and bankers to understand that "for the good of the world" more help is needed for an Asia in an "explosive state." Asia, he said, will continue in this explosive condition because "a giant has been unleashed... the giant may stumble and fall, but he prefers to make his own mistakes..."

None can dispute the latter. India, side by side with Red China, has not gone Communist nor will she unless her methods of representative democracy fail. Many nations in Asia do not wish to be Communist or Western. They want to remain independent. But since none is prepared industrially for production of domestic and export goods and since few have adequate political experience, they must have help.

Who will give it... Russia or the West? The World Bank and the Monetary Fund are both excellent agencies. They do not give away money. They lend it on a business basis. Their record is good. We trust that all three of the President's proposals will be adopted in this historic meeting in Delhi.

Fulton Countians Urged To Vote School Bonds

Fulton County voters will go to the polls on Oct. 23 to decide the fate of another school bond issue of $3,325,000. Because of tax digest limitations, the figure is considerably less than actually is needed to permit the county to stay ahead of enrollment increases.

Included in the proposed list of projects are three new elementary schools, one new high school and additions to four high schools and eight elementary schools.

Because of the legal limitations on issuance of bonds, the county has to come back every year or so with new proposals. That is the reason for such frequent school bond issues in the county and why there will be others in the future. As old bonds are retired and the property tax digest increases with normal growth, the county must ask for new funds to try to stay abreast.

Fulton County has a splendid school system with a capable board and an outstanding superintendent in Paul West. School construction costs have been held to figures much lower than in most communities without sacrifice of quality. But the county's population still grows and the need for new school buildings grows with it.

We feel confident that the county's voters will approve this bond issue for adequate public schools in spite of the seeming uncertainty about the future. Somehow or other, public education must be continued and Fulton County must have the facilities for doing so.

Ike Names Able Jurist To U.S. Supreme Court

Judge Potter Stewart, of Cincinnati, one of the brilliant young judges of the Midwest, has been named to the U.S. Supreme Court in a recess appointment to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Justice Harold H. Burton. Judge Burton, 70, is resigning on doctor's orders. Judge Stewart is 43 years old.

The appointment, the fifth to the court by President Eisenhower, is one which should meet with almost universal commendation. Judge Stewart, whose father is presently a justice of the Ohio Supreme Court, has a distinguished background. He is a cum laude graduate of the Hotchkiss school of Yale University and of the Yale Law School. He then was a Fellow at Cambridge for two years.

After being associated with major law firms in New York and Cincinnati, he was named to the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in 1954. He has served four years on that bench and attained a reputation among lawyers in the court's jurisdiction as a brilliant young jurist. In addition to trial and judicial experience, Judge Stewart was a member of the city council of Cincinnati and was vice mayor of that city in 1952-53. Newspapermen will be pleased to know that he was at one time a reporter on the Cincinnati Times-Star.

We congratulate Judge Stewart and the President for appointing him.

Louie Morris Bridge Heralds Dawn of Era

The Louie Morris Memorial Bridge which will be dedicated today is a highly important spoke in the Savannah River Development Program, hub of which is the mammoth Hartwell Dam project.

Located just south of the dam and linking Georgia and South Carolina, the bridge will carry a tremendous volume of traffic in the years ahead as the river development program triggers industrial expansion and provides recreational facilities for millions of people.

It is indeed appropriate that much of today's dedication program will be devoted to paying tributes to the memory of three men who expended so much time and effort toward bringing about the harnessing of the Savannah River and thereby laying the groundwork for the economic progress to follow.

The late Louie Morris, editor of the Hartwell Sun; Senators Walter F. George of Georgia and Burnet R. Maybank of South Carolina were tireless workers for the Hartwell Dam project and other phases of the river development program.

They and others who battled so hard and faithfully, often in the face of great obstacles, to establish the foundation for the work now moving toward completion deserve the eternal gratitude of the citizens of Georgia and South Carolina.

Georgian Points Out Dire Consequences That Would Follow Closing of Schools

Hahira — In the Oct. 1 issue of The Constitution, Ralph McGill makes a statement with which I heartily disagree. His statement is, "But the assumption must remain... that the adults in those states still prefer to abandon their schools rather than to allow even one school district to make a try at compliance."

If Ralph McGill is basing this "assumption" on the result of the last election I cannot follow his mode of reasoning. I have openly opposed the closing of the schools from the first and yet Ralph McGill has me numbered with those who would "prefer to abandon their schools rather than to allow even one school district to make a try at compliance."

If he will take the pains to make a little survey I am sure he will find a large majority of the people who prefer mixed schools to no schools at all.

To close the schools means not only that the children must be deprived of an education, but also that all our teachers will be thrown out of their jobs, our splendid school plants will be left to rot and decay unattended and retired teachers will no longer be issued a check at the beginning of each month.

Yes, I voted in that election, but there was only one way to vote on the segregation issue for all candidates were agreed on this one point. So I found but one alternative to the way I voted and that was not to vote at all.

Thomaston Quotes Biblical Passage

Thomaston — Charles L. Allen supported the thesis developed in his column of Sept. 16 with the quotation, "No one hath seen God at any time."—John 1:16.

A view opposite that taken by him could be more amply supported with Scripture. Examples: "Then went up Moses, and Aaron, Naab and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel. And they saw the God of Israel. . . .—Exodus 24:9-10. "And the Lord spake to Moses face to face, as a man speaketh to his friends. . . .—Exodus 33:11. O. M.

She Salutes Work Of Nathan Leopold

Atlanta—A good idea may be original in one quarter yet fully and successfully explored elsewhere. As factually detailed by his inspiring best-seller, "Life Plus 99 Years," Nathan Leopold pioneered in the field of education for rehabilitating convicts, among other scholarly endeavors.

To study his methods, educators from near and far visited the high school which Leopold established in 1933 at Stateville, Ill. One professor from Chicago expressed "amazement at the heights to which the human spirit can rise in spite of an environment such as this." The school now offers correspondence courses to inmates of 19 penal institutions. Students when paroled are given credit in outside schools or, seeking work, can qualify for better jobs.

For one blind prisoner's sake, Leopold mastered Braille in addition to his command of 27 languages.

Nathan Leopold's prayerful works of repentance, his 18-hour-a-day regimen of self-discipline and conscientious effort to aid others for more than three decades, compose one of the noblest and most exciting human documents of our time, a book that is authoritative and will live.

What Makes Up The Voter's Mind?

WASHINGTON—An American political consensus is being reached in the most local and fragmented series of contests in millions of farmhouses and thousands of hamlets, towns and cities across the United States of America.

This biennial congressional campaign, like the 85 that have gone before it across a century and three-quarters, is leading up to what is always called a "national election"—and never is that at all. What are really coming in November, instead, are so many scores of small elections over so many real and open and hidden and sometimes merely implied "issues" as to be quite beyond discerning, let alone counting.

The whole present process is one of vast diffusion, with two exceptions. There is the Deep South, where Democratic primaries alone have long since settled who is to come to the House and Senate. And there is a handful of hard-core Republican areas in the Midwest and New England where Democratic challengers run against Republican certainties simply out of duty to a two-party tradition.

But for the vast bulk of the country this is a real election. And the real question in the obvious sense, on all present readings, is not whether the Democrats or the Republicans are to control the new Congress. Rather it is how much the present Democratic majorities are to be expanded.

But men will be elected or re-elected as "Democrats" who are far closer to most of the Republicans than are at least one-quarter of the Republicans themselves. Men will be elected or re-elected as Republicans who are practically indistinguishable from 80 per cent of the Democrats.

One party—probably the Democrats—will return here in January in command of at least the procedures and possibly even the ultimate actions of the 86th Congress. But the total result of the election will have been based upon hundreds of candidates' personalities and promises and public attitudes—and sometimes the total lack of such attitudes.

The simple truth is that it will be a great mistake to go about reading vast national and international import into the results of this current congressional election. No doubt it will prove that the country in a vague, general way is more "Democratic" than Republican. But for what kind of a Democratic Party will the people have spoken? The party of the advanced liberals? The party of the moderates? Nobody in the world will know that answer.

Is this bad? Not in this correspondent's view. For a truly "efficient" party system—in which every sheep is plainly separated from every goat—has often wound up with the goats feeling obliged to destroy every last wrong-headed sheep or vice versa. It is not too bad a thing to keep every form of the absolute—even absolute clarity—out of politics.

Charles L. Allen

Man Has Wealth Of Unused Powers

One of the greatest writers of all time was Sir Walter Scott. During his last illness he asked someone to bring him "The Book." His friend knew that Sir Walter had lived with great books all his life and he asked, "What book?" He replied, "Ah, there is only one Book, just one Book."

Every day new books are being published and many of the books men and women have written have blessed mankind. Many authors have sought to write about life and how to live it but no book can be compared to The Book. In the Bible man finds the answers to all life situations and that is one reason why the Bible will always remain as the Book.

The original language in which the Bible was first written has for a long time been a dead language. But the Bible is constantly being translated and retranslated into the living languages of living men. Today one may read the Bible in more than a thousand languages and dialects. The languages die, but the experiences of men are the same.

Go back in the distant past and stand by the side of Moses as God is speaking to him at the burning bush. Some may feel that "burning bushes" have no place in this modern day. But in one way or another, we feel challenged, as Moses was, to some high task. He feels inadequate to the task.

But God would not let Moses turn away. God asked Moses,

"What is that in thine hand?" (Exodus 4:2). God is reminding Moses of his own strengths and abilities. No man is helpless. Every one of us has powers we have never used. Moses had physical strength, leadership abilities, a good mind. In addition, within his breast burned the flame of faith.

Within the hand of every man there are certain powers. When we fix our minds on the problems and difficulties of life, we are tempted to slip away into the darkness of despair and defeat. But God, in many ways, reminds us of the powers we hold within our hands. As we concentrate on our own strengths under the inspiration of our God, the impossible become possible.

Just before death overtakes him, Moses looks back over the hard paths of life and testifies, "The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms" (Deuteronomy 33:27). And centuries later another writer says of him, "And Moses . . . endured, as seeing him who is invisible" (Hebrews 11:27). And there are many whose lives have been on the Moses pattern.

Roscoe Drummond

Paul Butler Hails Democrats' Record

QUESTION: As the spokesman for the liberal wing of the Democratic Party and advocate of liberal legislative policies, are you satisfied with the record of the 85th Congress? PAUL M. BUTLER, chairman, Democratic National Committee: First, let me say I do not consider myself the spokesman for any wing of our party.

I have always supported and advocated the policies and programs of the overwhelming majority of our party. And that majority is never satisfied as long as there are so many needs to be met. But I am proud and the Democratic leadership of the 85th Congress can be justifiably proud of the record of accomplishment we have to take to the voters this fall.

That the majority of our party is well aware there is more to be done, particularly in such areas as constructive labor legislation, education, housing, employment and health and welfare programs, was reflected in the Democratic efforts in the 85th Congress, efforts which were defeated by strong Republican opposition.

QUESTION: The Republican Party has often criticized the Democratic Party for spending too much, and is repeating that criticism today, pointing to the programs in the last session calling for federal funds.

CHAIRMAN BUTLER: But at the same time that Republican spokesmen are criticizing the Democrats on this score, they are boasting about the improved national economy that came as a result of such Democratic programs. While the administration pursued its "wait and see" economic policy throughout the long Republican recession, Democrats moved ahead to enact the highway construction bill, providing badly needed highway improvements and jobs for the unemployed; to extend unemployment compensation to relieve hardships; to lower the interest rates on FHA loans to give the slumping housing industry a boost.

QUESTION: Republicans say the 85th Congress enacted an inadequate civil rights bill. What do you say?

CHAIRMAN BUTLER: Despite the fact that the so-called "party of Lincoln" has always blamed our party for civil rights defeat, the fact is that the 85th Congress passed the first major civil rights legislation in 82 years — a measure that was rightfully hailed throughout the land as a great step forward.

QUESTION: How will the Democrats make use of this Democratic record in Congress?

CHAIRMAN BUTLER: All Democrats, running at every level of public office, can go to the voters throughout this campaign with the Democratic record written by the 85th Congress — a record which clearly shows the basic Democratic interest in the majority of the people, and which you yourself, Mr. Drummond, described as "a downright good record."

Democrats can talk about that record and contrast it with Republican lack of leadership, the drift and delay in vital foreign and defense measures, the Republican opposition to the measures the people want and support.

By pointing up this Democratic record in the face of Republican opposition, our candidates have tangible evidence of the need for an even greater Democratic majority.

U.S. Banker Vardaman Resigns, Moves to Albany

Senator's Son Ends 11 Years As Federal Reserve Governor

President Eisenhower Tuesday formally accepted the resignation of James K. Vardaman Jr. as governor of the Federal Reserve System, effective Dec. 1.

He will move to Georgia to become president of the Bank of Albany.

Vardaman told The Constitution's Washington Bureau that he will make his home in Albany, and that he will also maintain the Sea Island residence he acquired in 1952.

One of the nation's top monetary policymakers since 1946, when former President Truman appointed him to a 14-year term on the Federal Reserve Board, Vardaman is a native of Greenwood, Miss., and holder of a distinguished military record.

OLD PERSONAL FRIENDS

The White House made public an exchange of letters between Eisenhower and Vardaman, old personal friends, shortly after Vardaman paid a 45-minute farewell call on the President Tuesday.

In his letter to Eisenhower, Vardaman said:

"After 25 years of public service, a large part of it in combat forces of the United States Army and Navy, I would like very much to retire and devote the rest of my time to private interests in the calm and comfortable climate of my home areas of south Georgia and south Mississippi."

ABSOLUTE MAXIMUM

The 64-year-old official, whose FRB term still had two years to run, also said he has been serving with reluctance for the last two years "because of my belief that 10 years is the absolute maximum time that anyone should be allowed to serve continuously as a governor of the Federal Reserve System."

In a letter addressing Vardaman as "Dear J. K.," the President said he was accepting the resignation with personal regret. Eisenhower added:

"The nation as a whole has benefited from your incisive and inquiring approach to central banking policies and procedures and your concern for the public service role of banking in the nation."

ARMY OFFICER

An Army officer in World War I and a Naval staff officer in World War II, Vardaman has been awarded the Legion of Merit, Silver Star, Purple Heart and numerous other combat decorations. Commanding officer of the landing party during the North African

From May, 1945, until his appointment to the Federal Reserve Board eight months later, Vardaman served as naval aide to then President Truman.

The federal official, already well acquainted with several of Georgia's top business executives, was in the state for a major address three years ago this month at a meeting of the Georgia Bankers Assn. in Valdosta.

The Bank of Albany is the smallest of the city's three commercial banks, with deposits of about $10 million. It is not a member of the Federal Reserve System. Law prohibits him from working with a member bank for two years.

The bank is state chartered and is a member of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Gainesville's John Jacobs Jr. Heads Georgia Kiwanians

John W. Jacobs Jr. of Gainesville was elected governor of the Georgia division of Kiwanis International as the group wound up its three-day 39th annual state convention here Tuesday.

George T. Smith of Cairo was elected treasurer and Dearmond Carter of Thomaston was re-elected secretary.

Elected district lieutenant governors were: Robert H. Wharton, Atlanta; George W. Funderburk, Hogansville; Lester F. Dollar Sr., Bainbridge; Tot H. Weatherly, Baxley; George M. Haslam Sr., Fort Valley; Charles B. Presley, Augusta; Joel Hunt, Elberton; Gilbert H. Gibson, Vidalia; Dr. Edgar M. Lancaster, Monticello; H. Milton Stewart, Cornelia; Keith Lovelless, Cedartown; Grady L. Lindsey, Forest Park; Frank McCall, Moultrie; R. L. Mathis, Decatur, and Claude M. Hicks, Marietta.

Gov.-nominee Ernest Vandiver, speaking at a luncheon that ended the convention, praised Georgia Kiwanians for their aid in helping bring new industries to the state. He said a continued and accelerated "progressive prosperity" in Georgia depends upon:

Maintaining in all levels of government "a healthy business atmosphere that will serve as an attraction to the ever expanding American economy to move into this area."

Aiding local chambers of commerce, civic clubs and citizens groups to provide local conditions that will help attract new businesses.

Vandiver repeated criticism of the U.S. Supreme Court for "high-handed and unorthodox procedure" in its rulings against school segregation.

"The people of Georgia," he added, "do not entertain for a moment any thought of permitting the substitution of government by judicial fiat from Washington for local self government and local self determination."

France Abandons Party-Label Voting

By ROBERT C. DOTY

PARIS—Frenchmen will vote for men instead of party labels when they elect the parliament of the Fifth Republic Nov. 23 and 30. The new system is expected drastically to reduce Communist strength.

The government of Premier Charles De Gaulle decided Tuesday to abandon completely proportional representation and the party list system in effect since World War II. The cabinet chose to return to the system of man-to-man contests on the winner-take-all basis last employed here in 1936.

150 SEATS

It is impossible to predict with accuracy the changes that will be brought about by the new system. Only in the most general way can certain probabilities be defined. Reasonably certain is the prospect that the Communists will lose from a half to two-thirds of the 150 seats they held in the last parliament resulting from the elections in January, 1956, under proportional representation.

Under the old system, voters in each of the 90 French departments were required to choose among the rival party lists of candidates for all of the seats of the department. Since this system minimized personalities and stressed party doctrine, it was favored by big, well-organized parties. It also made remote the relationship between the voter and his representative.

PARTY MANAGERS

It gave party managers a whip hand in ticket making and enforcement of party discipline in crucial parliamentary votes. Under this system, seats were distributed by proportional representation: in principle, the party winning 30 per cent of the votes got 30 per cent of the seats.

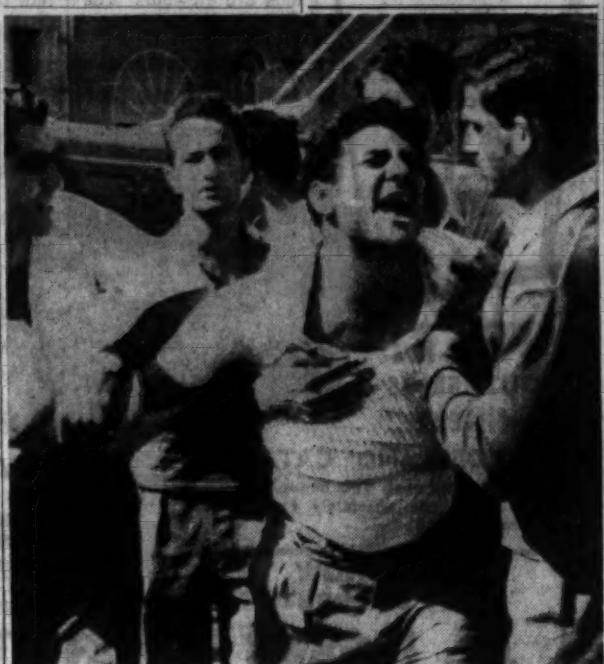

The system adopted Tuesday will cut France up into 465 new "circumscriptions"—or electoral districts—each having about 93,000 inhabitants. Each district will elect one deputy.

On the first round—Nov. 23—there may be as many candidates as there are parties. If no candidate receives as much as 51 per cent of the votes cast, a runoff will be held a week later. On the second round a simple plurality will be required for election.

Episcopal Report Widens Grounds for Annulments

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Just reasons may exist for annulling a marriage, even though they are too intangible to put a finger on, a report to the Episcopal Church said.

Emotional and psychological conditions "not susceptible of any legal definition at all" may be grounds for nullifying a marriage, the report to the church's general convention said.

DIVORCED PERSONS

But it added that many church authorities deem it impossible to make a judgment on the basis of such factors.

The church forbids remarriage of divorced persons unless the former marriage has been annulled under ecclesiastical law.

As for the psychological reasons that might render a marriage of no effect, the report said there are no precise tests for pinpointing such things. It added "few would deny that such personality defects—in the form of infantile patterns of conduct, over-dependence on parents, inability to accept marital responsibilities and the like—do exist."

SUCH DEFECTS

Many bishops, however, "feel that to establish such defects with certainty is an impossibility—at least in our present stage of psychological knowledge," the report said.

"Many others, however, feel that it is of great importance for the church to recognize frankly that such psychological impediments do exist, often manifesting themselves long after the marriage is solemnized."

The report was submitted by a three-year study commission headed by the Rt. Rev. Richard A. Kirchhoffer, bishop of Indianapolis.

Pakistan Under Rule Of Military

President Outlaws Political Parties

KARACHI (AP)—In a major political upheaval, Pakistan's President Iskander Mirza dissolved Tuesday night the central and provincial governments, outlawed political parties and declared martial law.

The drastic seizure of power came after six ministers of the national government resigned and Premier Feroz Khan Noon turned their jobs over to other Cabinet members.

Those who quit are all members of the Awami League party. They said they feared the government would not hold Pakistan's first general elections as promised next Feb. 15, and they did not want to be connected with such a failure. Noon pledged the elections would take place as scheduled.

Rep. Powell Pledges Aid To the Party

NEW YORK (AP)—Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY) made peace Tuesday with Tammany Hall. He pledged to work for the entire state Democratic ticket in next month's election.

The Negro congressman, virtually assured of his own re-election, controls better than 70 per cent of the vote in normally Democratic Harlem. Democratic leaders have been ardently wooing this vote, despite the fact Powell had been read out of the party.

The price the party paid for Powell's support was a secret. In the first flush of his primary victory of last August, Powell demanded full political control of Harlem and the replacement of Tammany district leaders with his own men. Otherwise, he threatened to support the Republican ticket.

Graham Heard By 200,000 in Charlotte Drive

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Billy Graham's Charlotte crusade attendance boomed past the 200,000 mark Tuesday night.

The evangelist spoke to another standing-room-only crowd at a "youth night" service. Crusade officials estimated the turnout at nearly 15,000.

In his sermon, Graham said that by 1965 "it is predicted that one boy in every five will have a police record by the time he is 20 years old."

He blamed juvenile delinquency on "insecurity, bad environment, too much leisure, not enough parental control, wrong type of movies, lewd literature." But he said that much of the teen-age trouble comes from "the over-privileged," rather than the under-privileged.

'There Ain't No Schools Closed in Alabama,' Gov. Folsom Boasts

Just good public relations is all. The Negro race in Alabama has confidence in me. And the Negro race in Alabama don't let the

Cobb Advisers Retain Ban on Beer Licenses

The Cobb County Advisory Board, meeting in Marietta, voted 2-1 Tuesday against restoring beer licenses in unincorporated areas of the county.

Superior Court Clerk John T. LeCroy offered the motion and was joined in the vote by Commissioner Herbert McCollum. Ordinary Troy Adair had asked that the licenses be restored, saying that nothing had been accomplished in revoking them following a wet-dry election earlier this year.

"There will not be one can less of beer sold in the county this year," Adair said. "All of the year will go to a privileged few where licenses are still issued and the county will lose over $90,000 a year in revenue."

The City of Marietta recently voted to restore beer licenses.

Hire Experts In Finance, State Urged

An expert on state government said Tuesday Georgia's greatest need is for permanent fiscal experts in both the legislative and executive departments.

This was the opinion of Page Ingram of the National Council of State Governments who met with the Senate Watchdog Committee. The committee will draft Gov. Nathan Vandiver's proposed reorganization of the state government.

Ingram cautioned the committee against undertaking too sweeping a reorganization of the government at one time. He said it would stir up too much opposition.

He advised the committee to concentrate on the "area of fiscal management and fiscal control" as a starting point in the reorganization. He said both the legislative branches need technical fiscal experts who will continue regardless of administration changes.

Sen. Carl E. Sanders of Augusta, a committee member, said the addition of new state employees would be "compounding our problem."

On Ingram's advice, the committee decided to sound out two or three experts in state fiscal matters to study Georgia's setup and to make specific recommendations.

Detector Confirms WAC's Lie Claim

A state lie detector specialist says a 20-year-old WAC private "is telling the truth" in saying she lied in testimony she gave last week in the murder trial of her ex-husband. Results of the test administered Monday to the witness, Miss Lucille Bohannon, were released Tuesday shortly after she pleaded guilty to perjury charges in a commitment hearing. Fulton Sol. Gen. Paul Webb said this does not mean that a new trial would be warranted for Russell Harris, 29, who was convicted last week of voluntary manslaughter. Webb said the charges against Harris of fatally stabbing C. E. Carter, 20, on May 31, still "is likely to be voluntary manslaughter."

Funds raised by the college fund are used by 33 member schools. The fund seeks $2,250,000 for 1958.

Would the People Stand For School Cutbacks?

By WILLIAM M. BATES
Constitution Political Editor

Whenever there's talk about reducing the cost of state government, the conversation usually gets around to the Department of Education and the millions being spent for public schools.

That's mainly because the schools take by far the biggest bite out of the state budget—almost $150 million this fiscal year. With that much money involved, you can always find politicians and others who think the amount could or should be cut.

But this is much easier said than done.

Where, for example, would you start cutting?

Would you reduce the number of state-paid teachers or reduce their salaries?

Would you cut out vocational education?

Would you do away with the free textbook program and let students buy their own?

Would you abolish the school bus system and let students get there as best they can?

WOULD BRING HOWLS

In theory, the ways of cutting down on public school spending are endless. But in practice, almost any substantial cut would bring howls of protest from a particular group or from the people generally.

With the state facing a $20 million deficit, there are likely to be suggestions during the coming months about reducing school expenditures as part of a general economy drive to avoid another round of state tax increases.

But if any real cuts are to be made in the school budget—the kind that can be measured in millions of dollars—it would almost certainly mean the elimination or curtailment of phases of the school program that are popular with the people.

Imagine, for instance, what would happen if the state abolished the free textbook program. If this were done, it would mean a savings of more than $4 million a year in textbooks, libraries and audio-visual aids. Or the state could save about $12 million a year if it got out of the school transportation program.

NOT TO SUGGEST

Either of these savings would be substantial. But who really believes the people would stand for it?

This is not to suggest that economies and savings cannot be effected in the school program. They doubtless can. But the kind that would save really big money would have to be made at the expense of present school services.

This matter of trimming government spending, in the schools or elsewhere, is a two-sided coin.

Chatham Finds Error, Cancels School Tax Rise

SAVANNAH (AP)—An accounting mistake in estimated school expenses and income this week caused the Chatham County Board of Education to announce cancellation of a school tax increase it had called for Oct. 21.

The referendum would have asked the public to approve eight mills over the constitutionally authorized 15.

Another referendum will be called, the board said, to ask for the extra amount now thought necessary—six mills. The date has not been set but will probably be in November.

Chatham Invites Williams To Testify on 'Shortage'

SAVANNAH (AP)—The Chatham County solicitor general and the foreman of the current Chatham County grand jury Tuesday asked State Revenue Commissioner T. V. Williams to appear before the jury with the facts in the reported $28,139 shortage in the state revenue department's Savannah sales tax unit office.

Solicitor Ryan wrote Williams on behalf of the solicitor and jury foreman Carl W. Seiler requesting that Williams appear before the jury to "give us the necessary information upon which an indictment may be based."

A letter sent by Ryan Tuesday morning to Commissioner Williams said the solicitor general's office has never received "any notice from your department" of this "alleged misappropriation."

Earlier, Attorney General Eugene Cook had stated in Atlanta he would recommend that a reported $28,139 shortage in the Savannah sales tax office be investigated by the Chatham grand jury.

Officials were quoted as saying the discrepancies were discovered in March in two accounts handled by former sales tax auditor Johnson and that the money had been recovered.

Attorney General Cook said last week he would send to the Chatham solicitor general reports to the attorney general's office on the Savannah shortage. Solicitor Ryan said Tuesday morning he had not received these reports.

Faubus Charges Tax Persecution

nothing would be left to buy as much as a handkerchief."

The governor said that if he was to be forced to pay taxes on the gift of the car then President Eisenhower should do likewise on "all the gifts he has been receiving at his Gettysburg farm, including tractors, pure-bred hogs, cattle, and so forth." He continued:

LITERALLY THOUSANDS

"By the same rule, it would also be necessary to collect personal income tax on the former presidential assistant, Sherman Adams, for the gift of the $3,000 hotel bill, the $2,500 oriental rug and the $700 vicuna coat."

Faubus declared that "literally thousands of people" were convinced that the revenue service was being used "to investigate those who oppose the national administration, as a means of re- crimination and vengeance, rather than the fair and impartial collection of taxes that may be due."

In Washington, acting Tax Commissioner O. Gordon Delk conceded the agent in the Little Rock district office of the Internal Revenue Service made a basic "error" in suggesting that Faubus might be liable for taxes on the state executive mansion.

But he added that Faubus' overall tax affairs were "still open" and under scrutiny. He did not elaborate on this point.

NOT PUNISHING

In a formal statement, Delk said the Internal Revenue Service "of course, does not try to punish anyone by asserting claims for additional taxes." To this he later added that "we do not select returns (for audit) based on the prominence of the taxpayer."

Faubus said he had first been informed that his returns were under investigation in "late September or early October." This was after the dispute had arisen between him and the Eisenhower administration over the admission of nine Negroes to Central High School.

The district director disagreed with the governor on this point. He said his record showed that agent Crenshaw had informed the governor by telephone of the investigation on Aug. 29 of last year, before the desegregation controversy began.

On last Sept. 26 Crenshaw sent a Form L-19 to the governor listing the proposed adjustments in his taxable income for the three years.

This is a letter that simply informs a taxpayer of the agency's proposals and requests him to contact officials for an informal conference if he so desires.

On receiving the Form L-19, Faubus sent a telegram to Russell C. Harrington, U.S. commissioner of internal revenue in Washington. He asked Harrington whether the agency was undertaking to collect income taxes from all governors on the rental value of the mansions provided by the states and on maintenance funds and salaries of servants.

Mathis said that up until this time he had not known that the governor was involved in a tax dispute with his office. He said that on the same day the telegram was sent to the commissioner he overheard a conversation on the matter and decided to look into it himself.

LETTER TO ATTORNEY

Following an investigation Mathis wrote a letter to William R. Bowen, one of the governor's attorneys. He informed him that "an improper procedure has been followed by the audit division of this office." The letter added:

"I refer specifically to the mailing, on Sept. 26, 1958, of the Form L-19 letter to the taxpayers (Mr. and Mrs. Faubus) which set forth the adjustments proposed by the examining officer for the years involved."

"The report I have on the matter indicates that the Form L-19 letter was issued prematurely and not in accordance with the applicable procedural instructions. It is my intention to review this matter thoroughly and I will advise you further as soon as possible. Meanwhile I have canceled the L-19 letter and you should consider it as of no effect."

He said Crenshaw had been unable to explain the reasons for his action. Asked if the agent acted innocently, he replied: "Knowing him, I would say that he did."

LAW JOURNAL EDITOR

His professional reputation, so far as any known accounts are concerned, has been regarded as outstanding. His record at college and law school were superior; he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and was an editor of the Yale Law Journal.

In Cincinnati before going on the bench he was a junior partner in the firm of Dinsmore, Shohl, Sawyer & Dinsmore, which had Procter & Gamble among its clients. Charles Sawyer, secretary of commerce in the Truman administration, was and is a senior partner.

As a young man, Stewart worked for a time as a reporter on the Cincinnati Star-Times.

On the court of appeals Judge Stewart's opinions have been regarded as superior examples of legal writing. A sampling of some of them may suggest some clues to his future performance on the Supreme Court.

MICHIGAN PRISONER

A case decided last June was an appeal from a denial of federal habeas corpus to a Michigan prisoner who had been convicted of rape. The majority of the sixth circuit affirmed the denial, refusing to release the prisoner, but Judge Stewart dissented.

The prisoner, one James Henderson, had voluntarily surrendered himself to the police on the afternoon of Aug. 5, 1942. By 11 o'clock that night, as Stewart put it, "he had been sentenced to prison for the rest of his life."

These swift proceedings took place when Henderson, who had no lawyer, pleaded guilty and was taken quickly before a judge late at night. Stewart's opinion took the view that the constitution, in such circumstances, entitled him to a lawyer.

"The prompt and vigorous administration of the criminal law is to be commended and encouraged," he wrote. "But swift justice demands more than just swiftness."

The Henderson case is being taken to the Supreme Court.

Stewart has sat on one case involving the question of racial segregation. It concerned school districts in Hillsboro, Ohio, that had been arranged to put Negro children in one school.

The chief judge of the sixth circuit, Florence Allen, wrote an opinion saying that the school of officials should be enjoined to reshuffle the districts immediately. But Stewart, in a perhaps more restrained concurring opinion, allowed the officials more time to adjust the districts.

In an important labor case Judge Stewart dissented from his colleagues' decision that a labor union could be deprived of federal facilities because a non-Communist affidavit filed by its leader at an earlier date may have been false.

Stewart said an already outdated affidavit should not affect the union's rights under newer affidavits.

The Supreme Court in 1956 reversed the sixth circuit, finding that denial of union rights could not be imposed as a penalty for a false affidavit. Justice Felix Frankfurter, concurring, quoted Stewart's views with approval.

At 43 Judge Stewart will be the youngest man to serve on the Supreme Court since Justice William Douglas, then 40, was appointed in 1939. The youngest men ever on the high bench were Justices Joseph Story and William Johnson, who were 32 when they began their service in the early 19th century.

SUGGESTED NAME

An assistant to Sen. Bricker said today that the senator had suggested Stewart's name when President Eisenhower appointed him to the court of appeals in 1954 and again this time.

However, it is known that the Justice department has had its eye on Stewart for some time and had recommended him for the job independently of any recommendation that may have been made by the Senator. In fact, Stewart was considered for the last Supreme Court vacancy, in 1957, and narrowly missed the appointment then.

Attorney General William Rogers called Stewart in Cincinnati Monday afternoon and asked him to come to Washington immediately. The judge was not told why, but it is a fair guess that he had a good idea.

FOUND ADMIRABLE

At 8:30 Tuesday morning Rogers took Stewart to the President, who gave him the news. The announcement was made up while Segal's bar association committee was hurriedly polled for its approval of a man whose judicial record it had already studied and found "admirable," as Segal put it.

Judge Stewart said today that he was an admirer of the late Sen. Robert Taft (R-Ohio). He was in Republican politics in Ohio, but sources there said he was nothing near a professional party man.

His father is Ohio Supreme Court Judge James Garfield Stewart.

The younger Stewart saw three years of active service with the Navy in World War II. He was elected to the Cincinnati City Council in 1949 and again in 1951.

Justice Stewart's family consists of his wife, Mary Ann; a daughter, Harriett, 13, and two sons, Potter Jr., 10, and David, 7.

Funeral Home in Lawrenceville. Flowers flew to Van Buren Tuesday after the slain man had been tentatively identified from a laundry mark on his shirt.

Bloodstains in the auto and a spent .32-caliber cartridge indicated that Gray had been killed a considerable distance from where the body was found, Oklahoma officers said. Arkansas police earlier had said they found nothing at the death scene to indicate he was killed there.

Gray's wallet was found in the dash compartment of the auto, officers said.

Officers theorized Gray might have been kidnapped in the vicinity of Atlanta Saturday, beaten and forced to drive out of town. They added it was possible that he had been killed in Georgia and the body dumped out 1,000 miles away.

Mrs. Virgil G. Gray Sr. said her son left home at 6 p.m. Saturday to go to a grocery store and was to return in a few minutes for dinner, which she had prepared.

No trace was found of him until late Monday when two squirrel hunters ran across the body in the Arkansas park.

Marks indicated where a ring and wrist watch had been stripped off the finger and arm, officers said. In Gray's pockets officers found a dollar bill and a handful of cigars of the brand he smoked.

When Gray vanished here he was reported wearing a yellow wrist watch, a Masonic ring and carried a wallet containing approximately $40.

The Gray car was driving belonged to the Wages Funeral Home, officers said. It had been driven less than 2,000 miles Saturday.

RICHES TO RAGS

Everyone is familiar with the "riches-to-rags" story of many successful people. But what of those who started out with money and wound up with nothing? There's Ivar Kreuger, who caused many people to lose their money when his Swedish matchstick empire collapsed; novelist F. Scott Fitzgerald, who ruined himself by riotous living; George Brummell, leader of fashion who died in tatters because he called the English Prince "Big Ben." Ferdinand de Lesseps, one canal carried him to glory, another to ruin. You'll meet these and other Horatio Algernons in reverse in the fascinating new series "Riches to Rags" by Richard Berry. It will continue daily, except Saturday, in The Journal.

Death Verdict Inevitable For Anjette, State Asserts

but was unable to do so. After her death, he said, he performed one autopsy and was unsuccessful in determining the cause of death. On information from Coroner Lester H. Chapman he performed a second autopsy, he testified, dispatching samples of liver and kidney tissue and bits of hair to the state crime laboratory in Atlanta.

Dr. Campbell was on the witness stand when court recessed shortly before 5 o'clock. Judge Oscar Long told the jury he hoped to confer with lawyers on both sides and take stipulations which might "shorten the case to some extent."

Anjette, clad in a lustrous brown frock, fingered her small white New Testament in apparent calm while Adams told in detail of the last-minute agonies of the two husbands, the mother-in-law and the 9-year-old daughter, Marcia, she is accused of poisoning.

Just behind her on the front row of the spectator seats, C. Turner Neal, ruddy-faced, Arkansas farmer who is an uncle of her second husband, Joe Neal Gabbart, and his wife also listed quietly. Mr. and Mrs. Neal came to attend the trial in the absence of the handsome airline pilot's parents, who are ill and unable to be here, they said.

OTHER CASES

Although the 32-year-old, silver-haired widow is being tried now on but one charge of murder—the death of her little girl, Marcia—the three other cases will be brought in to show "scheme, motive and common design on the part of the defendant," Adams said. Judge Oscar Long overruled a motion by defense Atty. Jack J. Gautier to exclude mention of the other three indictments pending against Mrs. Lyles.

Adams told the jury that because of the nature of the poison, which he described as clear, practically tasteless, slow-acting and difficult to detect, the case against Mrs. Lyles will be largely circumstantial. But circumstantial evidence, he emphasized, "is legal, lawful, good evidence—good for the prosecution and good for the defense—like a two-edged sword, cutting both ways."

50 WITNESSES

Adams said he and his associate, Atty. H. T. O'Neal, who are acting for Sol. Gen. William West, (disqualified because of relationship to three of the victims), will place 50 witnesses on the stand. He told the jury the trial would probably "take longer than you would like it to" but every effort will be made to give Mrs. Lyles a fair trial.

Adams' summation of the case the State expects to prove started at 12:15 p.m., an hour after the last of 14 jurors was selected. Jurors selected Tuesday morning were William C. Newberry, 32, a power company employee, and Mark W. Caraway Sr., 33, an electrician. Mackey L. Clark Jr., 31, an insurance man, was selected as the first alternate, and Frank W. Comer, mill executive, was chosen as second alternate, to serve in case an emergency disqualifies any of the regular 12.

More than 50 jurors out of 128 were disqualified because they admitted to being biased in the

'Blue Murder' A Wacky Farce

Those terrible infants who are a cartoonist's wacky nightmare of British schoolgirls are up to their tricks again in "Blue Murder" at St. Trinian's, now showing at the Peachtree Art.

The English comedy is a cinematic sequel to an earlier picture shown here. It has a specialized appeal and is strong on knock-about farce and ludicrous situations. Joyce Grenfell, Terry-Thomas and Alastair Sim head the cast of schoolgirl types. There are several tantalizing glimpses of Sabrina, Britain's answer to Jayne Mansfield, and some other adult females with spectacular dimensions.

case. Court attaches said they thought that an unusually high number in a single case and attributed it to the fact that the Lyles murder case has been a five-month sensation in middle Georgia. Only 15 jurors were disqualified because they opposed capital punishment.

Adams, rambling on in a chatty, informal conversational fashion in outlining his case to the jury, was interrupted but once—when he said Anjette "spent money like a drunken sailor" after the death there probably would be more releases.

None of the fired employees were unit or division heads. They included field and home office personnel in various units of the Revenue department.

Merit System director Edwin L. Swain said that as of Monday there were 335 revenue employees who were not in compliance, according to his records.

However, Swain said his records would not show the recent changes and firings ordered by Williams.

The Constitution disclosed last April that a large number of revenue employees were on the payroll in violation of merit regulations.

The July-August grand jury investigated the reported merit violations and had served notice that it was considering a 24-count indictment against Williams. But the jury reported in a special presentment that an "understanding" had been reached with Williams under which he "promised" to bring his employees into compliance within 45 days.

The 45-day deadline will fall on Oct. 15. The current Fulton County Grand Jury was told, in effect, by Judge Virlyn B. Moore to see that Williams kept his promise.

The 46 ousted employees include E. E. Barnard, H. H. Prater, Nellie M. Stocks, J. E. Parks Jr., Barbara Baines, Florence J. Caswell, Harlan Christian, Geraldine Lowery, Dewitt A. Branch, Elias J. Chance, Herbert J. Calhoun, Robert H. Dunn Jr., Julius Gurin, John F. Harlow, H. C. Jenkins Jr., J. W. Kinney, William F. Mann, J. D. McLendon, F. E. Moore, W. S. O'Leary, H. O. Post, J. M. Rabbitts, R. C. Sorenson, R. P. W. Mack, A. W. Kilbourne, C. L. Mills, Dock Koller, Samuel Averis, J. E. Lavender Sr., Barbara Culpepper, Ann H. Hamphill, Linda L. Hobbs, J. W. Bell, Roger Calver, R. L. Grutchfield, Mary Emily Doster, J. E. Echols, Joyce Ann Gentry, Jennie A. Harris, M. S. Laster, M. W. Paul, G. B. Ramsay, Geraldine Rider, J. B. Stubbs, Paul M. Lantz and F. C. Eiler.

Gabbart, Defense Atty. William Buffington objected to that statement, Adams said, "I think we'll be able to prove it."

He called Anjette "one of the most scheming women that anyone could imagine" whose marriage to Ben F. Lyles Jr. was "probably not the best marriage in the world."

"I don't think she liked him," the prosecutor said, "Ben was probably not ambitious and didn't want to get ahead fast enough for her. He died a violent death, practically insane of arsenic. The direct result of his death was that she got her hands on $1,200."

TWO CHECKS

Six months after Lyles' death Gabbart, described by Adams as a big handsome Texan, came to town. He and Anjette were married in New Mexico on June 25, 1955, Adams said, a few days after they had ascertained that his GI insurance was in order, and five and a half months later "he was dead and she got $20,000."

"Joe Neal Gabbart was reduced from a six-footer, 200-pounder to a cold corpse," Adams said. "In February she received two checks—one for $10,000 from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and one for $10,000 from the government. She put them in the bank and she was broke 90 days later. She spent money like a drunken sailor. She had a Cadillac automobile."

THIRD OF ESTATE

Adams said Anjette's restaurant, popular coffee-break hang-out for lawyers and courthouse employees, did a good volume of business but was not a financial success because of bad management. He said she was in "financial chaos" and turned to her first husband's mother, Mrs. Julia Young Lyles, for help. Mrs.

Lyles became ill in August 1967 and, Adams declared, "the skull-duggery that went on during that period of 30 days she was sick will be brought to you by competent witnesses."

From her mother-in-law's death

Anjette gained one-third of her estate and control of another third for her children, Adams said.

"The estate of Julia Lyles was being dissipated," he said, "and as a result the money her children were entitled to was not going to be there."

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, Wednesday, Oct. 2, 1958 9

He said Marcia, the eldest of the two little girls, became ill and Anjette ordered her coffin

"two weeks before she died." He said she predicted the child's death and began clearing away her flowers and toys while doctors and nurses still fought for her life.

CLINICAL TEST PROVES "NO-DIET REDUCING"

A leading medical specialist put one group of people on a restricted diet while another group ate without restrictions. Both groups took REGIMEN TABLETS daily. In just 6 weeks, the "NO-DIET" group had actually lost MORE weight than the severe 1000 calorie diet group. This is documented clinical evidence that with REGIMEN TABLETS you can actually eat what you want and still lose weight!

Ike Committeeman Hits U.S. Road Patrol Idea

Possible creation of a "federal highway patrol" to police the nation's new interstate freeway system was vigorously assailed here Tuesday night by J. W. Bethea, executive secretary of the President's Committee for Traffic Safety.

Keep Schools Open, Urges Civitan Head

International Civitan President John B. Bond said in Atlanta Tuesday that a breakdown in the public school system would turn "democracy in the United States to dictatorship."

John B. Bond

In an address to the seven Civitan clubs of DeKalb County, Bond said that "powerful forces" are attacking the public schools.

"These attackers question the patriotism and good judgment of citizens to locally control schools," he said. "Patience and education of the people are necessary to keep public schools 'free and sound.'"

Bond, a professor of chemistry and physics at Austin Peay State College in Clarksville, Tenn., spoke to the combined Civitan clubs of DeKalb County at an annual "Ladies-Night" dinner meeting. His itinerary will include visits to Civitan clubs in Athens Wednesday, Rome Thursday, Fulton County Thursday night and Savannah Friday.

"This disagreement over what is the law of the land," he said, "could be avoided through the process of education. I am sure that public officials threatening to close public schools are not defiers of the law but are patriotic, law-abiding citizens, earnestly trying to preserve freedom under law."

He said the role of the Civitan should be to persuade citizens to inform themselves and then vote—or risk losing democracy.

"There has been some agitation in congressional circles for the creation of such a police force," Bethea said. "The supporters of that proposal say, 'The federal government is putting up 90 per cent of the money for those highways—why shouldn't it patrol them?'"

The President's committee, Bethea said, "is opposed strongly to any federal highway patrol, primarily because it would be usurping the responsibilities of local and state governments."

Construction of the U.S. expressway system "does make it increasingly important that the state governments be urged to adopt more uniform traffic laws," Bethea said.

"That's one of the main objectives we're trying to accomplish through these regional conferences with state legislators," he added.

The three-day conference for legislators of 13 Southern states, cosponsored by the President's Committee and the Council of State Governments, got under way Tuesday night with a reception and dinner at the Dinkler Plaza.

Objectives of the Atlanta conference were outlined to legislators by Bethea, T. D. Driscoll, associate director of the Council of State Governments, and Ray Ashworth, director of the Northwestern University Traffic Institute, which has been designated to conduct four such regional parleys.

Doctor's Killer Gets 11th Hour Reprieve

A last-minute reprieve was granted to J. C. Murray, Bryan County Negro who was scheduled to die in the electric chair Tuesday for the slaying of his employer, Dr. M. D. Abbott.

The condemned man was granted the stay to permit a sanity hearing. His conviction recently was upheld by the Georgia Supreme Court.

No Solution Yet in Tieup At GM Here

The majority of Atlanta's 5,500 striking General Motors employees will continue to stay off the job at least through Saturday.

Only one of the three plants has contract talks scheduled with United Auto Workers officials before Saturday. That is Fisher Body, which will meet with the UAW at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

No agreement was reached at conferences at Chevrolet assembly plant and parts warehouse, and at the Doraville Buick-Oldsmobile-Pontiac plant Tuesday. And no new talks were scheduled.

UAW 10 and 34 officials are scheduled to attend a meeting at the international headquarters in Detroit Wednesday to discuss the new national contract signed last Thursday.

Atlanta's 5,500 UAW members and some 250,000 other GM employees are striking on local issues at GM plants. Only seven of GM's 126 plants were operating or ready to operate Tuesday.

Union Ex-Principal Rebuffed by Court

Mountain Circuit Judge John E. Frankum Tuesday at Blairsville took the first step in resolving a heated dispute among Union County's school officials that has left county high school students without a principal or a general science and physics teacher.

In a suit to force county school Supt. Pat Helton to renew the contract of former high school Principal C. R. Collins, Judge Frankum ruled in favor of Helton.

He based his ruling on another contract that Collins had signed to become principal at Lively School in Chattooga County.

The judge's decision, handed down in a courtroom packed with high school students and their parents, still left the 500-student school without a principal or a teacher to instruct four classes of general science and one of physics.

The school board is slated to meet at 10 a.m. Friday to try to select a principal.

Money for Patients

The House State Institutions and Properties Committee listed an increase from $2.57 to $3 daily per patient as the principal need at Milledgeville State Hospital following a two-day tour Tuesday of three state institutions in Milledgeville. Also visited were the Georgia State College for Women, and the Boys' Training School.

Dempsey Loses Miami Casino Bid

MIAMI (UPI)—Dade County's Metro Commission Tuesday revoked its surprise action of last week in approving a proposed ordinance to permit gambling casinos and slot machines here.

The 3-2 vote for legalized gambling provoked a storm of protests from all corners of Dade County. The vote passed the ordinance on first reading and provided for a hearing Oct. 21 before final action would be taken on it.

The ordinance was drawn up from a plan for legalized casinos submitted to the commission by Jack Dempsey, former heavy-weight boxing champion. Dempsey said it would bring in about $25 million in additional revenue for the county.

But Tuesday's 4-0 vote killed the proposed ordinance. There was little discussion. Commissioner John McLeod, who sponsored the gambling ordinance last week, voted Tuesday to kill it but he also asked the county attorney to draw up an ordinance that would abolish all race track "gambling" in Dade County.

He said he would push the ordinance if the state Legislature does not vote to give Dade a bigger share of the revenue from parimutuel betting.

"I don't think Dade County should prostitute itself for $160,000 a year," McLeod said. "That's all we got back from Tallahassee."

Iraqi Strong Man Smashes Revolt

By WILTON WYNN

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP)—Premier Abdel Kerim Kassem, the Iraqi strong man, has smashed a revolt by soldiers supporting his chief rival, Col. Abdel Salam Aref.

A regiment was disbanded, Aref was placed under house arrest, according to reliable informants.

Kassem took over the government July 14 after a coup overthrowing King Faisal and Premier Nuri Said, both slain.

The threat against Kassem arose last weekend. Most of the population was unaware that anything was going on. Kassem acted so swiftly the civilian life of the capital was not disturbed.

Tight official secrecy has made it hard to get the facts. But it is reported Kassem learned Saturday a group of so-called free officers of Aref's regiment were planning to move against the regime. This officer clique was angered because Kassem had removed Aref from the post of deputy prime minister and planned to send him to West Germany as ambassador.

Sunday morning, heavily armed troops in battle helmets guarded all roads leading into Baghdad. Aref was put under house arrest. Officers in the regiment backing Aref were transferred to distant points or put under surveillance.

It appeared clear that Kassem has won this round and for the moment is the real strong man of the country.

The latest information indicates that mediators are trying to patch up the quarrel between Kassem and Aref which has smoldered since the pair teamed to overthrow the old regime. The mediators are trying to persuade Aref to accept the Bonn appointment which he initially rejected.

Aref is said to be a member of the Pan-Arabist Baath party, which seeks immediate union with President Nasser's United Arab Republic. Kassem is friendly to Nasser, but is building up a purely Iraqi brand of nationalism, and clearly wants no union with the U.A.R. in the foreseeable future.

Vocational School Up For Talks

Plans for construction of a $3 million trade school for the Atlanta area will be discussed at a meeting Wednesday.

Members of the Joint Atlanta-Fulton County area vocational committee will meet at 10 a.m. in the office of Miss Ira Jarrell, city school superintendent. Under a proposal the state is expected to match equally funds provided for the new structure.

At the present time, Atlanta and Fulton County operate vocational training as a cooperative and joint undertaking. The expanded program might provide facilities for other educational systems in the Atlanta area.

In addition to Miss Jarrell, Thomas W. Clift, vocational consultant, and Harold Jackson and Oby Brewer Jr. will represent the city. Fulton School Superintendent Paul West and W. L. Robinson and Mrs. P. D. Christian Jr., president and vice president respectively of the Fulton County Board of Education, will represent Fulton County.

$500,000 in Permits

Permits for construction valued at more than $500,000 were issued Tuesday by Building Inspector William R. Wofford.

Barge Thompson Corp. got a permit for erection of the $300,000 Lakewood Boys' Club at 1900 Lakewood Ave., SE. Thomas Bradberry & Associates are architects on the structure.

A permit also was issued for a $212,215 addition to Pitt Elementary School at 2210 Perry Blvd., NW. Central Construction will do the work. Toombs, Amisano & Wells are the architects.

Billy Graham

One's Belief Must Be in The Savior

QUESTION: Am I wrong in believing that God is with everyone as long as he believes, no matter what church he belongs to? — S. A. E.

ANSWER: The authority we have is the Bible, and it says, "For God so loved the world He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him, should not perish but have everlasting life." What are we to believe? We are to believe that God sent His Son for our salvation, and we are to live for the One who died for us. That is what we are to believe; nothing more, nothing less! Many churches believe this truth. All evangelical Christian churches believe this, and proclaim it to the world. There will always be those to whom the cross of Christ is "foolishness." It was so during Paul's day. It is so today. The true Christian, regardless of the church he attends, says, "The life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me."

ONLY A MAHARAJAH'S COLLECTION COULD OUTDAZZLE HIS JEWELS
Mr. Juels Robert Brought 1,500 Pieces of His Own Design to Atlanta

PEARLS ENCRUSTED IN ANTIQUE SILVER
Empire Necklace Shown on Esther Hasley

You Don't Get the Feeling You're a Christmas Tree

By RAYMONDE ALEXANDER
Atlanta Constitution Fashion Editor

"Buy matching jewelry but wear it coordinated," advised Mr. Juels Robert, as he busily spread some 1,500 pieces of his own jewelry designs on the black velvet palettes in a local specialty store.

Explaining himself, he pointed out that matching sets are what someone else created for you and this leaves you no means of showing your own fashion personality. On the other hand, when you have pin, bracelet and earrings to match you can wear only two at a time according to what your costume needs, thus coordinating your own fashion.

"Jewelry should be selected with the same care as you select hats, handbags or gloves," warned Mr. Robert.

PEARL NECKLACE

"Every wardrobe should include a pearl necklace, matched set, gold necklace or chain, and a pair of gold earrings as the very minimum in jewelry. However, this season fashion silhouettes are putting more emphasis on jewelry by virtue of their simplicity. The new high-waisted look almost demands that a pin be placed at the waist line or a necklace drop low to meet the waist."

Mr. Robert has been designing jewelry for some 15 years and has always been an artist, not only in jewelry but as a painter, violinist and sculptor.

A graduate of Juilliard School of Music and Cooper Union Art School, he first designed jewelry for Earl Carroll's Follies and Broadway comedies. Many of his designs, appearing in 20th Century-Fox motion pictures, have set trends and now, even though he has his own jewelry business, he continues to design for Hollywood and television.

JEWEL WITH SIDE NOTE

The newest note he has created for this season is the jewel with a side note. It is a necklace featuring a large jewel placed at the side. The lariat is another favorite for this season and he has achieved dazzling beauty with one fashioned of ruby stones combined with tassels and jewel pendants.

Harvest colors, taken from one of his own still-life paintings, are rampant in his pins, necklaces, bracelets and earrings. There are beads in orange, grey, amethyst, and olive. Pins were in dark topaz to orange tones. Ruby to light red is very important. For navy, there were jewels of light blue tones to dark blues and purples.

Mr. Robert loves contour earrings and tries to steer clear of button types. He feels that contours compliment a woman's face more. And an interesting and welcome feature of his earrings is that the clip is fashioned with a plastic cushion to take pressure off the ear lobe. Another comfort feature of his jewel fashions is the lightness of his earrings. You don't get that feeling of being weighted down like a Christmas tree.

MADE BY HAND

All of Mr. Robert's jewels are made by hand and his stone sets are imported from Europe. His designs are easily recognizable by seed pearls, filigree work and cut stones.

One of his more famous designs was the result of a gag to be pulled on Steve Allen during his late show. It was a jeweled roll of salami—it was covered in pearls, diamonds, crystals and bows.

"It was dramatically different to look at but not too good to eat," Mr. Robert laughed.

Miss Griffin To Marry Mr. Taylor

Mrs. Nellie J. Griffin of Lenox announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Jeanette Griffin, to Tommy R. Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Taylor of Tifton.

The wedding is scheduled for 4 o'clock on Nov. 27 at the home of the bride-elect.

Miss Griffin's father is the late A. J. Griffin. She is a graduate of Cook County High School in Adel.

Her fiancé was graduated from Tifton High School in 1956, and is employed by the State Highway Department.

'I Woke Tangled in Wire, Scratched and Cut Up'

By BETTY CARROLLTON

Her blonde curls were disarranged by the cold night wind, but if the shapely girl was aware of it, she gave no sign. Nor was she concerned with the murky water churning beneath her bare feet. She moved across the long bridge in Dallas, Tex., as though in a trance.

On the other side of the bridge, watchful eyes of a constable in a parked police car followed her progress. And when she paused, the officer rushed to her side, caught her shoulders and pulled her back from the rail.

"I thought you were going to jump," he explained to the girl who awoke, crying, in his arms.

NO THOUGHT OF JUMPING

But pretty Anne Ames had no thought of jumping. In fact, if she had any particular thought at all, she did not know it. Anne was walking in her sleep again. It was not the first time, and far from the last.

The Denver-born dancer, who has been appearing at Club Peachtree in Atlanta, has been a sleepwalker since she was a child. Her first realization of her nighttime ventures came at a Girl Scout camp in Colorado when she was 8.

"I got out of bed and rode a toboggan down the trail at camp," she recalled. I woke up tangled in barbed wire, scratched and cut. And scared half to death."

ALERTED BY PARENTS

The Girl Scout troop leader, alerted by Anne's parents, was "right behind" her, and, when Anne's sobbing ceased, she explained that the child had been walking in her sleep.

"Of course, I didn't understand any of it," Anne admitted.

As she grew older, her parents sought professional help, and when she was 13, Anne spent several weeks in a sanatorium for treatment.

"But none of it helped," she said.

Once, she woke up before a 10-cent store doorway. The police took her home that night. She's been bruised by falling from ladders she's climbed in her sleep; frequently she has awaked miles from her apartment.

The dancer and her roommate take certain precautions, such as putting chairs in front of the bedroom door or around the bed. ("But I just move them and keep walking," Anne said with a sigh.) Sometimes, when she's living alone in whatever city she's appearing, Anne has even tied herself to the bed to prevent her night excursions.

"I seldom stay in hotels," she disclosed. "Whenever possible, I rent an apartment — on the ground floor."

TIRED OR NERVOUS

Realizing that the sleepwalking often comes during the nights she's especially tired or nervous, Anne then takes sedatives to assure a safe, sound sleep.

Doctors remind the attractive blonde that she's "nervous and high strung," which, they believe, accounts at least in part for her trance-like adventures.

"When anyone wakes me up while I'm walking in my sleep, I always wake up crying," she disclosed. "I have rather weird, impossible dreams, too. For instance, the night I fell from the patio, I'd been dreaming I was caught in the middle of a tornado. Other times, I've been lost in swamps. But I never remember anything that occurs when I'm sleepwalking."

CAMERA CATCHES SLEEPWALKER AT HOME

Doctors credit it to her "venturesome nature," and Anne puts it in simpler terms:

"I think it's because I'm always trying to be something I'm not," she suggested. "Nothing in particular—just always searching for something new."

Junior League Members Plan 'Red Riding Hood' Surprises

By ANNIE LOU HARDY

Members of the Atlanta Junior League will turn trouper next week.

At least those engaged in the Children's Theater production will join thespian ranks and troop to 11 public schools, to the delight of hordes of Atlanta children.

They will present that childhood favorite, "Little Red Riding Hood," but it is no ordinary version of the old fairy-tale classic, because the author, Charlotte B. Chorpennig, has filled it with delightful surprises.

For instance, there are two wolves instead of just one, and dear old Grandmother doesn't get eaten!

The original ending was re-written to please the two little daughters of Mrs. Clayton Rich, who takes the title role in the play. They attended an early rehearsal and insisted that the original ending be changed in order that Virtue might be better rewarded and Villainy properly punished.

Hence the "Young Wolf," portrayed by Mrs. Donald Whittemore Jr., isn't such a bad fellow after all. And the far wiser "Old Wolf," played by Mrs. John B. Knight, does his best to keep his slightly villainous younger friend on the straight and narrow path.

Mrs. Ed Dickey takes the part of Riding Hood's mother, and Grandmother, who is smart enough to cope with any number of wolves, is enacted by Mrs. Henry Troutman Jr. The Woodsman, played by Mrs. Mike Murphy and formerly known as the tale's hero, demonstrates a new kind of wolf trap instead of resorting to his reliable old axe.

Without benefit of professional assistance, the Junior League members have produced every phase of their presentation. Mrs. William C. Rawson, Mrs. John Beach, Mrs. George Montgomery and Mrs. Kenton Musgrave combined forces to paint all the scenery, achieving a forest backdrop that doubles, believe it or not, as the interior walls of Grandmother's cottage.

WOODSMAN POISES AXE, GRANDMA LOOKS ON Mrs. Michael Murphy, Mrs. Henry Troutman Jr.

For the first time the Children's Theater has a full-time stage manager, Mrs. Tom Shelton, as well as a full-time prompter, Mrs. John Chapman. The costumes were designed and made by Mrs. Fred Schultz and Mrs. James Caswell, who have endowed the wolves with real fur ears and tails. Mrs. Robert Strickland Jr. has mastered the difficult job of make-up, which is no cinch with a couple of wolves in the wings.

Mrs. Albert Boykin and Mrs. Eugene Dykes are in charge of the lighting, and Mrs. Frank Hagen manages the props. Music has been tape-recorded by Mrs. George Chase, and Mrs. Robert Ison and Mrs. William Wallace are in charge of public relations.

Mrs. John Langford, who for the second year is chairman of the Children's Theater committee, directs this remarkable production.

They Rolled Out the Red Badges For the Press at Murder Trial

MACON—Well, sir, I got my badge, all right, and I can't decide whether I feel like a newly inducted member of the Order of the Eastern Star or the holder of a ticket to a river boat production of "Lena Rivers" when the show has been sold out for six months.

It's that tricky getting a press seat at the trial of Annette Donovan Lyles.

In the years I've toured the murder trial circuit I've grown accustomed to certain occupational hazards. I have battled crowds and fought for standing room in city courtrooms, shared the water bucket and dipper germs with half a county in a country courtroom, fallen through rickety cane bottom chairs, artfully dodged streams of tobacco juice and learned to accommodate myself to anything from an opulent, six-vegetable midday country dinner to a package of cheese crackers and a dipperful of water, snatched at a hurried session.

I learned before I was old enough to vote that you'd better not count on the locks on courthouse bathrooms and that if you decided to wash your hands your chances at a towel to dry them on lay between the copy paper on which you'd scribbled your notes and your own petticoat.

But in all these experiences I've never encountered anything like the meticulous care and planning that has gone into arrangements for the press at the Annette Lyles murder trial.

Twenty-eight chairs behind the gleaming brass rail of the balcony have been set aside for the press and carefully labeled with the name of each newspaper, wire service, radio and television station represented. (It took us about half a day to start swapping around and changing seats.) Twenty-eight red-lettered passes, some labeled "press" and some labeled "photographer," have been issued by George A. Doss, the Macon News' courthouse reporter and chairman of the local committee in charge of arrangements.

These passes, planned so men could wear them in their breast pockets, are used to get past the cordon of police in the courthouse lobby but must be immediately hidden when you enter the courtroom. (The court evidently felt 28 red-labeled reporters looking down on them, pencils poised over notebooks, would be unnerving to the jury.)

The rules which Judge Oscar Long promulgated and then had mimeographed and distributed to the press run to nine legal-sized pages and are punctuated with many stately legal phrases.

The main thing, of course, the rule we all leaped through and found first, was the one against pictures in the courtroom. ("No photographic or pictorial reproduction or transmission in sound to the outside of any part of any proceeding in the courtroom during a session of court or between sessions shall be taken or made in any manner by anyone. . . . No photographic or pictorial reproduction shall be made in such proximity to the courtroom . . . that any part of the operation, including especially any flash or sound, shall be visible or audible.")

This one may have its dull moments—some trials do—but it's a cinch it's going to be what the court decreed, an orderly, quiet, dignified trial "reflecting the importance and seriousness of an inquiry to ascertain the truth and accomplish true justice." A lot of people have put a lot of time and thought into guaranteeing that.

Annie Lou Hardy Gala Program Marks '58 Symphony Week

Beautiful models casually strolling a woodland path, accompanied by their favorite canine companions, set the pace for "Tea and Symphony" which highlighted Symphony Week's program yesterday afternoon at the Luau.

Gathering for tea, fashionable Atlantans found a green-carpeted runway, outlined in palms, extending over the "River Luau." Here graceful manikins paraded the latest in fall and winter attire from Leon Frohman's to the strains of an orchestra housed in the teahouse, and to the tinkle of a fountain playing on tropical foliage.

Milady was served a cup of tea on arrival and another during the revue. Afterward she served herself from an exotic tea buffet in the Tiki Room, starting such things as shrimp Cantonese, egg roll Polynesian, Tonga canapes and Cha Shu a la Kona.

Tomorrow evening's opening symphony concert, with Mildred Miller as guest artist, will be no less brilliant and exciting. The Tower Theater will take on the appearance of a Venetian palace, with palms lining the foyer, gold-sheathed refreshment tables adorned with huge arrangements of multicolored carnations and roses, fountains flowing with colored water, and candles lighting the pretty scene.

Members of the Symphony's Junior Guild, headed by Mrs. Claiborne Glover Jr., will serve champagne during intermission from tables spaced about the theater. All guild members, junior and senior, and their escorts will be in evening dress—a note they encourage because of the glamour it lends to a gala occasion.

MR. AND MRS. MITCHELL KING JR. went up to Cashiers, N.C., to spend the weekend with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Rex Farrior of Tampa, who have been vacationing for 10 days at High Hampton Inn. Today the Farriors will arrive in Atlanta to spend this weekend with the Kings at their Wakefield drive home.

A NEW ADDRESS for Mr. and Mrs. J. Spalding Schroder and their children, Van, Jack, Michael and Chris, is the Pallas Apartments at 1559 Peachtree St. The family moved last week from 494 Johnson Ferry Rd. The elder daughter, Suzanne, is in school at Manhattanville College, New York.

Former Californians, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Confer, are occupying the Schroder home on Johnson Ferry road.

ANOTHER FAMILY ON THE MOVE is that of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Tharpe, who with their sons, Bobby and Mack, have taken possession of their new home on W. Paces Ferry drive. They formerly lived on Dellwood drive. Bobby is enrolled at Darlington School in Rome.

MRS. GILBERT CHEVES JR. of Cocoa Beach, Fla., who is here for a visit to her parents, Dr. and Mrs. B. L. Shackelford on Blackland road, will be central figure at a luncheon to be given tomorrow at the Luau by Mrs. T. W. Branch. A group of the honor guest's close friends will gather at 12:30 to meet her.

THE JAMES M. HOGANS are back at their Peachtree road home after a 10-day motor trip which included Asheville, White Sulphur Springs and Charlottesville. They ended the tour with a weekend at Holly Inn, Pinehurst, N.C., which has just opened for the winter season.

MRS. HERBERT G. ROWE III of 2427 Drew Valley Rd. is in Washington, D.C., to attend McCall's Congress on Better Living which opens this evening with a dinner at the Shoreham Hotel and Henry Dreyfuss as speaker.

MRS. WILLIAM G. WELCH is taking reservations for the luncheon planned for members of the Atlanta alumnae chapter of Delta Gamma to be held at 12:30 o'clock today at the home of Mrs. Charles F. Patterson at 747 Greenview Ave., NE.

Mrs. Welch and Mrs. P. G. Wear will be cohostess with Mrs. Patterson.

MRS. MAX KUTTNER of Rome is a patient at Piedmont Hospital while undergoing a medical check-up.

AN ATLANTAN, MRS. LUTHER HEARD, was elected president of the Chi Omega Mothers' Club at the mother-daughter luncheon held Sunday at the Continuing Education Building at the University of Georgia.

At the meeting after luncheon, Mrs. Crawford L. Pilcher of Warrenton was elected vice president; Mrs. James Young of Cedartown, recording secretary; Mrs. Russell Elder of Atlanta, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Madison Fowler of Marietta, treasurer.

Huguenot Group Sets State Meet

The Georgia Branch of the Huguenot Society of the Founders of Manakin in the Colony of Virginia will hold a state assembly on Friday, Oct. 10.

The session will be held at 11 a.m. in the Atlanta Woman's Club. Mrs. W. Elmo Duke, state president, will preside.

Mrs. Luther Isbell will discuss the national assembly which was held at Harrodsburg, Ky. Dr. Herman L. Turner will speak. Mrs. Andrew S. Marshall, Mrs. Moproe Swiley Jr. and Mrs. Joe Medford will present a musical program.

Honor guests will include Mrs. William Glenn Brown, Mrs. James Beneson, Mrs. Isbell, and Mrs. Clarence D. Tebo.

Teen Isn't Mixed Up Kid But Real Love Takes Time

By DOROTHY RICKER
Dear Mrs. Ricker:

I have several problems and I am sure you can help me solve them. People say that I am pretty and have a nice personality. I am 16 years old and I think I am old enough to date, don't you? Well, my father doesn't and he doesn't trust me although I have never done anything to make him feel this way.

Mrs. Ricker, he won't even let me go to church with a boy or a group of friends. Sometimes I get some awful ideas in my head but I don't carry them out and I don't do anything wrong. There is a 19-year-old boy who is in the Navy. We have known each other for almost three years.

While he was home we were together a lot but never by ourselves. I mean our families were always there. He told his mother he loved me and would never love anyone else. I love him, too.

Now he is back in this country but is stationed a long distance from here. We are writing to each other and he always signs his letters, "I love you, etc." Should I tell him I love him?

Should a girl ask a boy if she can wear his class ring? I guess you think I'm a crazy mixed-up kid.

I do not think you are a "crazy mixed-up kid"—I do think you need more parental understanding and also need to look at your acquaintance with this boy in a more mature manner.

You see, this boy in the Navy is lonely and probably has a longing to have a girl he can call his own. So, since you have shown interest in him he may picture you as his girl and the only one he ever will love. But, only by spending some time together (as dates) and learning to know each other much better can either of you be sure if it's real love.

Dear Mrs. Ricker:

I am nearly 18 years old and I don't know what it is to take a girl out or to have one like me. They just don't want anything to do with me and always give me the "get lost" routine. I have plenty of money to spend, I take a shower every day, wear neat clothes, get top grades in school and excel in sports.

My hobbies are radio, horses, fishing, hunting and taxidermy. I get along swell with other boys and everybody says I'm the "nicest guy around." My friends say the girls don't like me on account of my looks. Now tell me straight, Mrs. Ricker, do looks count so much that, in spite of my assets, I have to be a hermit as far as girls are concerned?

If you will just look closely at some of the boys you know and even some married men you will realize that, while it is desirable to be good looking, a boy does not have to be an Adonis for girls to like him. Of course, either a girl or boy who is grotesque will find it difficult to attract the opposite sex—but I doubt that your problem is that serious.

I suspect you may have over-emphasized this situation in your own mind until you have about given up hope. Perhaps your concern about your looks has affected your ability to get along with girls. Then, too, it's true that some of the younger girls, especially, may attach too much importance to good looks and you just haven't found the right girl yet.

MISS MONITOR WARMS THINGS UP AT ATLANTA WEATHER BUREAU
Georgia's Tedi Thurman Visits With Harold Cummins, Meteorologist

She's Unpredictable, Just Like the Weather

By HARRIETTE S. WEINSTEIN
Fooled by her own weather reports, the nation's and Georgia's most well-known weather reporter arrived in Atlanta in a heavy wool suit only to be greeted by 72-degree clear and sunny weather at noon.

Miss Monitor, Midville's Tedi Thurman, made her first trip here since she left Atlanta and her school life to head for Washington and art school in 1946.

"Of course, I've been home since then," she purred throatily, just as she does to make temperatures skyrocket as she reads the weather report. "But I fly straight to Augusta." (Midville and Tedi's family are about 50 miles from Augusta.)

The strawberry blond is best known today for her sultry rendition of such scintillating bits as "In Atlanta, 68, clear," and so on.

THREE YEARS' REPORTING
And after three years of reporting on the weather, she still makes each report sound of vital interest.

"I have to be interested in what I'm reading," she said in honey-coated tones. "After all, I wrote it."

Each hour she calls the weather bureau in Washington and then sifts through the list to choose the towns she will name.

"Atlanta always comes first," she explained. "NBC felt since I was a Georgia girl it was only right. Of course, when I started the weather reports, I had no idea the job would turn into such a well-known spot. But then no one had any idea that the show itself would become such a big success."

STATUESQUE TYPE
Tedi, a statuesque, 5'7½" artist and model turned radio personality with a few movies in between, has fair skin and delicate features to match her Southern charm.

She left Atlanta to study painting in Washington. But her face was most often on the easel instead of behind it. So she sold her car in order to finance the trip to New York. And, like a modern Cinderella, posed for a magazine cover her second day in the big city.

For the next seven years, Tedi earned $35 an hour for high fashion posing plus some appearances on TV shows.

Producer Mike Zeamer saw Tedi in a pilot film for the "Today" show and marked her down for a spot in the yet-untried "Monitor" weekend service.

THOUSANDS OF LETTERS
Thousands of fan letters (many of which include proposals) gave Miss Monitor added spots in reporting arrivals of ships and a few brief fashion notes.

(Last week Tedi received a second letter from one of her avid fans. "Please excuse me for signing my name as Mr.," read the letter. "You see I am only 9 years old.")

After movie parts in "Jail Bait" and a trailer promoting "10,000 Bedrooms," Miss Monitor says she would never go to Hollywood permanently.

"I might go out to make a movie and then come back," she said. "But I plan to be with Monitor as long as the series runs."

And she may possibly add singing to her list of varied activities with the studio planning to shift her record contract to a new company now "since the other one has done nothing with it."

GUEST TV SPOTS
She has done some guest spots on TV, including lampooning herself on the Jack Paar show last summer.

"I did take-offs on the weather reports—funny, but true."

Now her modeling is limited chiefly to endorsements and promotions. And her job with Monitor takes her all across the country as ambassador to affiliate stations. She was here in connection with the opening of a new grocery store on request from NBC affiliate WSB.

Arriving in Atlanta with a small bandage around her thumb, Tedi explained that the weather has tossed her a few tricks, too.

"I used to live in a penthouse apartment. And one night as we were eating dinner on the patio, it started pouring rain. As I rushed inside I caught my thumb in the door. And the nail has been weak ever since."

SITTING ON TERRACE
"It must have been before I was a weather expert or I wouldn't have been sitting on the terrace," she laughed, a laugh just as excitingly husky as her speech.

She has since moved to another apartment where she spends her off-time hours "making tape recordings with some of my friends, going to Broadway shows in the winter and visiting the beach in the summer."

Her most frequent escort is a French doctor, an exchange student. "But I also date several others," she added.

"Romantically," she smiled, as she prepared to leave for a brief visit home in Midville, "I'm unpredictable—like the weather."

Music Club To Hold Reception

Members of the Atlanta Music Club, headed by Mrs. Charles Chalmers, president, will entertain at a reception Saturday evening at the Atlanta Woman's Club, immediately following the program by Metropolitan Opera baritone, Leonard Warren.

The party will mark the opening of the club's Membership Series for the winter, and the Music Club members will gather to meet Mr. Warren and his pianist, Willard Skeetberg.

Serving as hostesses will be members of the hospitality committee, including Mrs. W. W. Anderson, chairman; Mrs. George Beattie, cochairman; Mrs. W. W. Anderson Jr., Mrs. Bates Block, Mrs. T. C. Davison, Mrs. Byron Harris, Mrs. Donald Hastings, Mrs. George Hightower, Mrs. Brooks Pearson, Mrs. Julian Trivers and Mrs. Prince Webster.

Officers of the Music Club will assist in receiving. In addition to Mrs. Chalmers, they are Mrs. J. Lee Edwards, Mrs. Edith Howell Clark, Mrs. Homer Edwards Jr. and Mrs. Ernest Felber, vice presidents; Mrs. Bruce Woodruff, recording secretary; Mrs. White Hancock, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Francis Storz, treasurer.

PTA Group
Names Officers

Officers of Gresham Park PTA are Mrs. Tom Carnes, president; Mrs. W. O. Brown, first vice president; Mrs. J. D. Bates, second vice president; Mrs. Charles Bearden, recording secretary; Mrs. W. T. Crane, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Charles Hunter, treasurer.

IT'S A BEAUTY—Mrs. John J. Hodgins accepts a silver wine cooler from Mrs. Fred A. Baker at left. Mrs. Hodgins received the trophy for Mrs. Roscoe E. Stewart of the Peachtree Park Garden Club who was top winner at the rose show at the Southeastern Fair. Theme of the show was "Atlanta Through the Years."

Officers' Wives Elects Officers

New officers of the Officers' Wives Club of the Naval Air Station include Mrs. Richard Lowellyn, chairman.

Elected to serve with her are Mrs. William J. McCoy III, co-chairman; Mrs. William Morton Billingsley, secretary, and Mrs. Robert S. Pendleton, treasurer.

New Arrival

UNWED MOTHERS AMERICA'S TRAGEDY

Who are America's unwed mothers? Why do some girls take a chance, while others save themselves for marriage? Why do 200,000 girls a year become mothers before they become wives? Illegitimate births have doubled in the past ten years alone and, reveals the current issue of Coronet Magazine, most of the young girls that now face the life of shame come from highly respectable families. Learn to recognize the danger signs before it's too late. Every parent, every young woman will want to read the facts about UNWED MOTHERS in Opening lead: Heart jack.

There are some hands which present several options in the play, each of which are so close as to render determining which is best a very difficult matter. It is precisely this type holding which deserves a deliberate huddle in consideration; so many others do not.

The final contract today was completely justified by the respective holdings. South won the heart opening and concluded that if the club king lay in the West hand most of his problems would be obviated. He, therefore, led a low club towards dummy's queen which lost to East's king and a heart was returned.

Declarer had no choice but to set up dummy's spade suit or rely on a possible cross-ruff. He then led a spade, cashed the ace, king and ruffed a third spade on which East discarded a club. South played a heart but West ruffed with the six of diamonds forcing dummy to over-ruff with an honor.

There was now no way to manage the hand so as to produce the balance of the tricks. The spade suit could be set up but there would remain no entry in dummy and the losing club could not be ruffed out without building up a trump winner in East's hand.

The line of play that appeals to us as being best would be as follows: Play a high spade, then ruff a low spade. Play a high trump from declarer's hand, then lead a trump to dummy. This tests out the trump situation. Since they have divided, a second low spade can be ruffed with South's remaining high trump, and dummy's last trump provides an entry to run the set up spades.

If it turns out that the trumps are 4-1 declarer must hope for a 3-3 spade break. Two trumps will then be outstanding, but a high spade is led and continued until the player with the trump ruffs in. Whatever he leads back is taken; then his trumps are extracted with dummy's last trump. On the good spade suit sufficient discards are obtained to fulfill contract.

RHYME A DAY

By OLLIE REEVES

"Every year thousands of phony stocks are sold, stocks that promise sudden wealth overnight. If approached, consult your broker or attorney."—Brochure quote.

A lot of money has been sunk . . . in stocks that promised wealth and fame . . . In looking through Aunt Fanny's trunk . . . we found a bundle of the same . . . a gold mine out in Idaho . . . from which no gold was ever panned . . . an oil well down in Mexico . . . that was as dry as desert sand.

But don't let that discourage you . . . (and, possibly, it never will) . . . for "hope springs," like the "mountain dew" . . . from some well hidden moonshine still . . . and hope will whisper in your ear . . . "Now is the time to take a chance . . . before the ending of this year . . . the price of all stocks will advance."

We don't know when it's time to buy . . . nor when it's time for one to sell . . . but there's no gold mine in the sky . . . nor money in a wishing well . . . We don't believe the experts know . . . for if they did I'd go to pan . . . Aunt Fanny's mine in Idaho . . . and I would be a wealthy man . . . or I'd be down in Mexico . . . as "only" as the fellow who . . . told dear Aunt Fanny, years ago . . . the well would make her "well-to-do."

(*Or did he mean, "easy-to-do"?)

British Health Planner Impressed on Grady Visit

As he put it, Arthur Blenkinsop was "truly green with envy" after touring the new Grady Memorial Hospital. Mr. Blenkinsop is a member of the British Parliament and author of Great Britain's health plan.

"We've added a lot of new units to hospitals, but we've done very little building from the ground up since the war," the Parliament member said. "We are planning buildings which can be erected quickly and then changed in some details, much as some modern schools. You can not tell at this date what will be needed in a hospital 20 years from now."

Mr. Blenkinsop toured the 16-story Grady accompanied by Frank Wilson, hospital administrator, and Dr. Bernard Hollman, of the hospital's staff. He was most interested in the way out-patients are handled in Grady's clinic. Dr. Hollman gave him a detailed account of how patients were seen as quickly as possible.

British Medical Treatment Free

Mr. Blenkinsop said that 100 per cent of Great Britain's people were eligible for free medical treatment and that "99 per cent took advantage of it."

"It's not true that a patient can not pick his own doctor in Great Britain," Mr. Blenkinsop said. "You have the same right of choice in a general practitioner as you do here. If you need the services of a specialist, your doctor will recommend one, just as is done here."

Mr. Blenkinsop will give a lecture on "The Future of the British Health Service" Wednesday night at Emory University.

Squirrel Problem Answers

Since the report in the Sunday paper a couple of weeks ago about the phone company's troubles with squirrels tearing the insulation off wires, I've received three possible solutions in the mail.

Jakie Middlebrook, 8, of Flowery Branch, says to put an aluminum or steel band two feet wide around the pole. The squirrel couldn't get purchase on the metal. Jakie didn't have any answer as to the woodpecker problem. (They peck holes in utility poles and ruin them.)

Mrs. Clarence Smith, of Dalton, also suggests a metal band, but one shaped like an umbrella or a man's hat brim.

Thanks, both of you, from the phone company. However, what do you suggest when the cable runs right through the branches of a tree? The bands wouldn't keep them off there.

Dr. W. M. Cone, Atlanta chiropodist, says that he has spent many years in the outdoors and this is what he has seen: "I noticed that the tulip poplar tree would have many of its lower branches die as the tree grows older. . . . Some of the smaller long, slim limbs had been skinned down to the wood—every bit of the bark gone. . . . I saw old bushytail doing it himself—or herself. It is done when he needs to repair an old nest or make a new nest. . . . Now there is nothing that looks more like a dead black poplar limb than a black insulated wire. . . ."

"Now it must be rather disconcerting to him when he finds that the insulation does not strip off like the poplar bark, so he just chews it up. You may find some small strips in their nests. . . . A few dead poplar limbs left around handy might just turn the trick. . . ."

The phone company engineers have tried just about everything else to no avail, so maybe it might work.

But what about the woodpeckers?

FATHER-AND-SON TEAM REPORTS FOR COMMUNITY SERVICES
John A. Sibley, James Sibley Show Current Campaign Figures

Fund Drive Hits 17 Pct. Of Its Goal

Community Services' three-county fund-raising campaign reached 17.3 per cent of its $2,359,656 goal at the volunteers' initial report meeting here Tuesday.

Workers brought in $419,835 and contributions were reported by nine drive divisions.

Largest individual quota percentage was made by the Special Gifts Division, headed by Cochairmen James Sibley and Phil Alston. This group reported $37,065 or 26.2 per cent of its $141,339 goal.

DIVISIONS REPORT

Other divisions reported as follows: Sponsors division, $303,504 or 22.3 per cent of a $1,360,280 goal; Negro division, $9,285 or 12.5 per cent of a $74,000 goal; Commerce, Industry and Finance, $55,176 or 11.5 per cent of a $476,480 goal; Educational, $4,101 or 9.3 per cent of a $44,109 goal; Government, $4,108 or 5 per cent of an $82,000 goal; Professional, $4,059 or 4.4 per cent of a $91,558 goal; Residential, $1,425 or 1.5 per cent of a $94,201 goal, and Business, $1,110 or 1.2 per cent of an $83,000 goal.

John A. Sibley, chairman of the board, Trust Company of Georgia, summed up Community Services' annual contribution to citizens in this area. The speaker pointed out:

"The greatness of a city is measured not by its wealth or its citizens' accomplishments but by the way it responds to the needs of its helpless residents."

URGES INCREASE

Inman Brandon, president of Community Services, urged workers to increase their efforts to bring in funds necessary for continuation of 57 health, welfare and service agencies in Fulton, DeKalb and Cobb counties.

The campaign, to last through October, seeks to raise 5.2 per cent more than Community Services raised here last year. George S. Craft, R. Howard Dobbs Jr. and Ben S. Gilmer are general drive chairmen.

The second report meeting is set for 12:15 p.m. Tuesday at the Progressive Club.

Voting-Age Georgians Up 44,000

Georgia has about 44,000 more citizens of voting age now than in November, 1956.

The Census Bureau estimates there are 2,246,000 civilians of voting age in Georgia now as compared with 2,202,000 two years ago.

This does not include those of voting age who are in military service. Georgia's total includes those 18 years of age and up. Kentucky is the only other state which permits voting at age 18.

The civilian population of voting age includes a great many persons who, although old enough to vote, cannot do so because they have not satisfied state requirements as to citizenship, residence or registration.

About 104,600,000 U.S. civilians will be old enough to vote in the general election next month, an increase of about four million over 1956. However, in the 1954 off-year election only about 42½ per cent of the total civilians of voting age cast votes.

14-State Emergency Survival Meeting Opens Here Oct. 27

Nationally known authorities on emergency preparedness will participate in a two-day, 14-state Southern Industrial Survival Conference here Oct. 27 and 28.

The conference is one of four to be held in the nation to give industry, banking, business and institutional leaders an exchange of ideas on organizing their facilities to minimize the loss of personnel and productivity in the event of major emergencies or enemy attack.

Invitations have been extended to key industry and business leaders in Georgia, Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico.

The conference to be held at the Dinkler Plaza, is sponsored by the Atlanta Metropolitan Chamber of Commerce Civil Defense Committee. Cooperating groups include the Downtown Kiwanis Club, the Metropolitan Area Civil Defense Unit, the Georgia Defense Department, Civil Defense Division and the regional office of Civil and Defense Mobilization.

Men About Town

It is a pleasure to report to Mr. Jack Tarver that our city is crowded with sports devotees. While strolling down Peachtree Tuesday, I was halted by confident Milwaukee fans, hopeful and arrogant Yankee fans, boastful Auburn fans, offense-minded Tech fans and irate Georgia fans. I regret to inform Mr. Earl Mann that no one inquired about Triple-A.

The Milwaukee boosters were delighted that Fred Haney has selected Warren Spahn to close out the World Series in the sixth game Wednesday in County Stadium. They are positive that the 37-year-old Spahn is destined to duplicate Lew Burdette's feat of whipping the once-invincible Bombers three times in one series.

Spahn won the opener, 4-3, in ten enchanting innings, then blanked the Yanks, 3-0, Sunday on two hits. Several veteran observers, including Mr. Whitlow Wyatt, said the indestructible southpaw had never looked sharper.

The Brave ace is accustomed to more leisure between working hours; in fact, he hasn't started with only two off days all season. But the Milwaukee faithful and Haney have great faith in Spahn. They also are relieved by the fact that the entire staff, including Lew Burdette, will be on call in the bullpen.

Outlar

Yankee rooters, a breed unaccustomed to defeat, were busily engaged in helping Casey Stengel name a starting hurler. Virtually everyone but Murry Dickson was nominated. Uncertain about the pitcher, they are positive about the outcome.

Meanwhile, Casey Stengel, afforded an off day and a crowded audience of authors, gave the boys something to write home about. Stengel mentioned most of the Yankee pitchers, and said that he was searching for a man to compare with Spahn. Since Bob Turley, who uncorked a sizzling 7-0 shutout Monday is unavailable, it isn't likely that Casey will uncover such a citizen.

—Operation Bandwagon Unloading

Stengel said he might not reach a decision until he watched his men warm up Wednesday. In all probability, Whitey Ford or Don Larsen will be warming up when the TV camera cranks up. Casey expressed a preference, however, for four more off days, saying he hoped it would rain for four days in a row.

Several Yankee addicts inquired whether I'd like to change my prediction of the Braves in six games. No, indeed, rain or shine, Milwaukee is the choice.

The World Series "finale" is scheduled for Wednesday and Georgia doesn't play until Saturday night, but I encountered more hate Bulldog fans than Yankee and Brave boosters combined.

"You said that Georgia would have a fine team this year," a man said. "In fact, you wrote that Georgia might not lose but three games. What is it you guys always say when you get something wrong? A typo, huh. Well, I trust that you meant Georgia wouldn't win but three games. They won't win that many."

"Let me tell you what happened in Athens last Saturday," another fellow said. But I told him the word had got around, and I had heard several versions, and didn't care to hear another.

"I'll tell you what's wrong with Georgia," an amateur coach volunteered. "They should play Francis Tarkenton at quarterback, move Charley Britt to halfback and let him throw those option passes like South Carolina does. And they should put Cicero Lucas back at guard where he belongs . . . and . . ." I informed the man that I would forthwith forward his instructions to Coach Wallace Butts.

Another gentleman who had leaped off Operation Bandwagon immediately after the Texas setback kicked off: "What gave you the idea Georgia would have a good team? And what kind of an alibi do you have for Coach Butts?"

Well, Georgia almost beat Auburn and did beat Tech at season's end. Regardless of what you read, hear or say, that happened. Most of the regulars returned and some promising sophs moved up. As for Coach Butts, a man who has won 120 games at Georgia needs no alibi. He does need a good season. I'm certainly no jury, only a witness, and Georgia has been very unimpressive in three outings. To say there was no cause for optimism at the outset is as ridiculous as saying at this stage that Georgia will lose only three games.

—Six Straight Bowls Is a Strong Defense

Football fans form a peculiar fraternity, otherwise they wouldn't pay $5 for tickets and spend the rest of the week talking about the game. Fortunately for coaches and sports writers, they are keenly interested in the game in general and coaching in particular. Otherwise, we'd all be unemployed. Still, it's difficult to figure some of 'em out.

"Tell me," a man said, "why in the world Bobby Dodd doesn't play a wide open brand of football?" I told the man that Tech visited six straight bowls stressing defense, and that might have something to do with it.

"We haven't seen a good offensive show at Tech since Frank Broyles left," another critic barked. It dawned on me that neither has Broyles. Don't get me wrong, I think Broyles is one of the finest young coaches in football. But I notice by the Arkansas Gazette that he is in the midst of a personal five-game losing streak, the last two at Missouri, the first three at Arkansas.

Hampered by a lack of material, Broyles can't get the Arkansas offense rolling. The Porkers didn't get inside the Baylor 20 in the opening loss, failed to make a first down in the second half against TCU.

"Why doesn't Coach Dodd put Floyd Faucette at fullback and use some of those players on both teams?" another man beamed. I informed him that he could contact Coach Dodd at the Tech athletic office.

It's really tough for a coach to get ahead in this game. For example, this Auburn man said: "Well, I see the UPI finally wised up and got Woody Hayes' permission to make Auburn No. 1 in their poll. Guess that's the first time in a long, long time that any team from this section has been No. 1 in both polls. But, you know, if Shug Jordan doesn't open up that offense, we won't be there long."

BAPTISM FOR WORLD AMATEUR

Scots Gather at St. Andrews To See Golf Open . . . and Jones

BY FRED TUPPER
(Copyright 1954, The New York Times Co.)
ST. ANDREWS, Scotland—The first World Amateur Golf championship is to receive its baptism here where the game began. Wednesday, 116 players from 29 nations are to begin stroke play on the uncompromising terrain of the old course, fabled down the centuries as the birthplace of golf.

In the long room of the weathered granite Royal and Ancient clubhouse sits the Eisenhower Trophy, a huge silver loving cup presented anonymously by a group of American sportsmen who conceived the tourney's idea. The trophy goes to the team who compiles the lowest aggregate over four days and 72 holes. Four men play, the three lowest daily scores to count in the total.

From all over, the clans were convening by the thousands in this grey-spired seaside burgh Tuesday night. They were here to pay homage to the American nonplaying captain, golfing's immortal Robert Tyre Jones. It was at St. Andrews in 1927 that Bobby rang

Braves Seek Series Clincher As Yankees Remain Silent

By JACK HAND

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Warren Spahn, 37-year-old Milwaukee ace, will try to clinch the World Series Wednesday with only two days of rest when he faces the New York Yankees in the sixth game. Casey Stengel did not announce a definite starter but hinted strongly it might be Whitey Ford instead of Art Ditmar or Don Larsen.

Although Spahn normally works every fourth day and never started all season with only two days off, Manager Fred Haney decided to shoot the works with his best. If it goes to a seventh game he always has Lew Burdette, his 1957 Yankee killer.

Trailing 3-2 in this best-of-seven series with their backs against the wall in the enemy territory of County Stadium, Stengel said he wouldn't name his starter until Wednesday after he watched his men warm up.

"You've got to get a pitcher to compare with Spahn," said Stengel. "Ford told me he is ready. I'm going to talk to Larsen. I don't like to use him with two or three days rest. He has had a sore arm ever since I got him."

"I think Ford expects to pitch."

"But then Ditmar is the best rested."

If Ford works, he also will be pitching with only two days off. He was beaten Sunday by Spahn when Norm Siebern messed up three or four fly balls.

Larsen, the big right-hander who pitched the perfect game in 1956, whipped the Braves Saturday 4-0. However, he has been troubled by an inflamed elbow all season. He tired and had to be taken out after seven innings Saturday.

Ditmar, a 29-year-old right-hander who came to the Yankees from Kansas City early last year has a 9-8 season record both as a relief man and starter. A year ago he was highly effective in two bullpen jobs against the Braves.

Burch, DeLany Loom Large As Tennessee Tussle Nears

Pair Handles Kicking Load

By BERT PRATHER

Kicking plays a prominent part in battle plans of any topflight football team, but never is this more true than when Georgia Tech and Tennessee get together.

And since the orange-shirted Volunteers from Knoxville are due to pay coach Bobby Dodd's Yellow Jackets a visit here Saturday afternoon before a sellout house, it might be timely to take a look at the toe artists who could be the difference between victory or defeat in this South-eastern loop bruiser.

Unlike most of the Tech-Tennessee duels of the past, bulk of the booting Saturday will be in the hands of a pair of sophomores. However, this doesn't mean the kicking won't be top-notch.

In Gerald Burch, the talented 185-pounder from Mobile, Ala., who is called back from his first-string right end position to do the kicking for the offensive unit, Tech has the finest long kicker to show at the Flair since the days of Dave Davis, another end.

Burch's average shrank some last Saturday when he booted a couple from the "short" end of the field. But he's still hitting at a 37.8 clip. No doubt young Burch could figure as a key man Saturday.

Same goes for veteran Joe DeLany, the senior right halfback on the defensive team. Joe's a precision kicker who is likely as not to boot the ball inside the enemy five-yard line.

Of course, sophomore Billy Majors, who operates at tailback for the single wing Volunteers, has to be a triple-threat or else he wouldn't be there. He is rated a very fine punter and quick-kicker. Ask Auburn.

Tech's Bob Cummings, who looked at young Majors in both the losing battle to Auburn and winning effort against Mississippi State last Saturday night, says "Billy Majors is possibly a better kicker than his brother Johnny (an All-America) was when he was playing for Tennessee."

"He kicks them high and those Vols sure do get down under them in a hurry," Cummings said.

Majors is averaging 38.0 per kick and Danny Webb, the only other Volunteer who has kicked this fall, is hitting a 35.0 average on five attempts. Majors is the big boy, though. He's toed the other 14 in the two games played.

And digging still deeper in the Jacket toe department, one can not overlook a young sophomore by the name of Tommy Wells. Tommy specializes in extra points and field goals.

Checking Tommy's work to

Tech Respects Vols' Majors

date, it will be found he's batting just shy of 1.000. His PAT average is perfect with four-for-four. His field goal is .500 since he made good on one against Florida State and missed from a bad angle in his only other shot against Tulane.

It is no secret around the Flats that they think Wells, who incidentally hails from Nashville,

Georgia's Britt: 'We're Going To Start Winning, and Then...'

Determination Still Present

By AL THOMY
Constitution Sports Writer

ATHENS—The face of a three-time loser is not always easy to paint.

Georgia is a three-time loser. Before Monday, the New York Yankees were backed to an ignominious brink with three losses in the World Series. A poor comparison, true, but a spiritual one, nonetheless.

Face of this three-time loser on Ag Hill could be one of many... determined jaws and glistening eyes, wrinkled brows, barking commands and words of praise, a proud shame, hope.

It could be coach Wallace Butts calling for a little extra from assistants and players; men in red and black rattling teeth and collapsing knees; five pursuing linemen snowing a reserve running from the Florida I-formation.

And it could be center Dave Lloyd insisting on practice though hobbling on an injured leg... or quarterback Charley Britt vowing "we're going to start winning and when we do"...

The Bulldogs are down, that no one denies. It is a credit to men of Georgia—coaches and players—that not one soul believes they're out. They've been beaten three times, but the way they see it, they beat themselves.

As Lewis says: "We should have won all three games. It was our fault, our mistakes that lost them."

There's no visible proof the Bulldogs were beaten physically by Texas, Vanderbilt and South Carolina.

"I have never criticized the desire and spirit of this team," Butts says. "That we've got. And though I wouldn't say I'm completely satisfied with the offense, we've scored enough and moved enough to win some games. Defense hasn't always been what it should."

On the field hefty Bulldogs collided in singles and pairs.

"We're going back to the fundamentals," said Butts, "blocking and tackling."

In one corner of Ag Hill, defensive linemen manhandled the I-formation. End Norman King of Atlanta crashed through repeatedly to spill runners behind the line.

"That boy's a real athlete," observed Butts.

Elsewhere, halfback Fred Brown danced and fought his way 40 yards against the freshmen, and fullback Bobby Galbreath decked a yearling with a vicious back.

Big Bulldog linemen pursued like a pack of hungry wolves.

Preseason optimism on Ag Hill has turned to determination for

Butts Wants 'Little Extra'

Florida State is a team of many talents and balance and the Seminoles aren't being taken lightly.

No matter how the record reads from here on out, this Bulldog team hasn't quit on itself. The feeling is they can go as far as they take themselves.

SCRIMMAGE SCRAPS: Charley Britt's 181 yards rushing and passing against South Carolina give him a total offense aggregate of 333 for the season. He stands excellent chance of being 11th protegee of coach Wally Butts to gain 1,000 or more yards in a year. Those who made it were Frank Sinkwich (twice), Zeke Bratkowski (three times), Mal Cook, Charley Trippi (twice), Johnny Rauch (twice), Freshman coach Quinton Lumpkin calls backs Harry Clifton of Blakely and Lehman Frankita of Statesboro, two 140-pounders, "two of the best nonscholarship boys I've seen."

Coach Butts said sophomore Fred Lawrence of Jacksonville will start against FSU if alternate captain and right tackle Nat Dye is not ready Saturday night. Lawrence will be returning to the scene of his prep career. Line coach Cal Stoll expects Dye to be sufficiently recovered for at least some duty. Norm King is first replacement for end Jimmy Vickers, also injured and also available for limited play.

The Georgia starting tackles haven't been at full speed since first week of practice when Riley Gunnels hurt a knee. Jim Whatley, who scouted FSU against Wake Forest, reports the Seminoles have: "good running attack, fair passing, fine pursuit on defense." He added FSU halfback Bobby Renna "could make just about any backfield in the SEC."

One newcomer edged into the ratings in each classification. North Fulton belied Fulton, 20-0, and eased into the sixth slot in AAA. Crisp County knocked off Irwin County, 14-0, and claimed the same spot in AA.

Carrollton, Vidalia and Warren County gained admittance in A, B and C, moving into slots No. 10, seven and six with 20-0, 21-13 and 18-13 triumphs over Milton, Treutlen County and Louisville Academy.

Valdosta, Northside and Idle Glynn Academy retained two-three-four status in AAA, the first two named beating Lanier, 19-0, and Southwest 6-0. LaGrange stepped a giant stride ahead to sixth with a 13-0 verdict over Albany. Griffin fell a slot to seventh after a 21-14 throttling of Decatur. Moultrie stepped up to eighth on a 29-13 tanning of Baker. Richmond Academy eased down two places to tenth despite a 25-0 triumph over Groves. Athens, 29-7 loser to Elberton, lost its tenth ranking.

Crisp's jump into Newnan's old ninth spot was the only change, in AA. Cairo, Dalton, Waycross, Jessup, Avondale and College Park still follow in order after convincing triumphs. Bainbridge and Cedartown, both idle, held onto eighth and tenth. Newnan edged Rockmart.

Lakeview made the big jump in Class A, a three-slot vault to second after a 33-0 bumping of tough North Whitfield. Sandersville remained third after a 46-14 thrashing of Swainsboro, but Statesboro fell three steps to fifth after a 20-13 squeak past Dublin. Forest Park retained fourth after a 63-7 rout of Henry County, and Dublin held on at six.

Screven County won over Cochran, 55-6, and held spot No. 7. Model and Cartersville bowled over Cass, 55-19, and Gilmer, 27-6, and moved up a peg each to eighth and ninth. Toccoa dropped from ranking after bowing to North Habersham, 26-21.

Class B and C leaders underwent big shakeups. Jenkins County and its vanquished foe, Metter (14-13), moved ahead from fifth and fourth to third and second as Fort Valley dropped to fourth. Morgan County and Washington-Wilkes, 29-6 and 32-0 victors over GMC and Richmond Academy B, stepped up a slot each to fifth and sixth.

CONSTITUTION PREP RANKINGS

SMYRNA AND HAWKINSVILLE LEAP TO THE TOP

By CHARLIE ROBERTS

Smyrna Campbell and Hawkinsville vaulted to the Class AAA and C pinnacles in The Constitution weekly rankings of high school football teams with stunning upset triumphs over the weekend.

Charlie Roberts

Gerald Gillespie's Smyrnans all but clinched their sub-region crown by bowling over rugged Marietta, 16-7, the Blue Devils tumbling from the top to Campbell's old fifth slot in the AAA rankings.

Bobby Gentry's Hawkinsville Huskies knocked off Fort Valley, rated second in Class B last week, and eased up one spot ahead of idle but unbeaten Tallapoosa for the C lead in the 13-0 process.

Thomasville, Stephens County and Tucker rolled over Tifton, 27-0; Forsyth County, 39-0, and previously unbeaten West Gwinnett, 56-0, to retain their top rungs on the AA, A and B ladders.

One newcomer edged into the ratings in each classification. North Fulton belied Fulton, 20-0, and eased into the sixth slot in AAA. Crisp County knocked off Irwin County, 14-0, and claimed the same spot in AA.

Burch, DeLany Carry Heavy Load Saturday

Tenn. is one of the best kicking specialists to show here in many a day.

Yes, the toe could be the thing Saturday.

FLAT FACTS: Coaches tagged Tuesday's offensive and defensive scrimmage one of best of the fall. Sophomore halfback Frank Nix, the speed boy who missed last week's game because of an ailing back, took part in the full-scale knocking. Ronnie Lewis, another soph halfback who was hospitalized Sunday with an abscess, was kicking up his heels in the scrimmage, too. But fullback Lester Simerville, who suffered a badly bruised shoulder against Tulane, was still in sweats along with ace end Jerome Green, who has been hobbled for past 10 days with a foot injury. Both are still on doubtful list for Saturday.

Maxie Baughan, who played an outstanding game against Tulane, was still in high gear Tuesday. The big center drew praise for his work on both offense and defense Tuesday.

Ends Fred Murphy and Tommy Rose and guard John Neal Reed were other defensive stars. On offense Baughan, Murphy, guard Foster Watkins and tackles Billy

GERALD BURCH
Duels Bill Majors

Shaw and Ed Nutting were singled out for their work against red-shirted "B" teamers. Halfback Bobby Gene Harris and Ben Smith, who'll take Simerville's place as first offensive fullback if the latter doesn't mend in time, looked good among the backs. Marvin Tibbets, sophomore quarterback, was working with the fullbacks. Defensive backfield coach Lew Woodruff was the only coach who was not pleased with work in his department, but then Lew is thinking about Majors' passing record of five for five (73 yards and one TD). Incidentally Majors' rushing average is half a yard per carry.

Army Nation's Best with Ball, And Tigers Continue Stingiest

NEW YORK (AP)—The superior balance of Army's football team was shown Tuesday in the latest figures from the NCAA Service Bureau.

The Cadets are No. 1 in total offense, second in passing offense, third in rushing, seventh in total defense, eighth in rushing defense, as they prepare for their important game with Notre Dame Saturday at South Bend, Ind.

Although not among the top 10 in pass defense yardage, Army has allowed the lowest percentage of enemy passes to be completed—only eight in 40 attempts. The West Pointers also are second in scoring.

Only in punting is the Army team down the list, ranking 67th nationally. The Cadets have averaged 34.2 yards on six kicks. Southern Methodist, beaten by Notre Dame last Saturday, is the punting leader with an average of 42.4 on seven kicks.

Army in two games has a total offense average of 515 yards. College of the Pacific is second with 453 yards. Washington State leads in forward passing offense with an average of 237.3.

Auburn is the total defense leader, having allowed an average of 57 yards. The Tigers also are tops in rushing defense, with a 21.5 average. In forward pass defense, Kentucky is the leader, permitting an average of 28.7 yards. Auburn is next with 35.5 yards.

Houston leads in scoring, with a two game average of 36.5 points. Army is second with 35.5, followed by Wisconsin, 35.0; Oklahoma State, 31.7; West Virginia, 30.7; and VMI, 30.3.

Layne 'On Ready' Lions' Rote Injured; Giants Get Card Landrith; Clem Faces Rugged Test

Quarterback Bobby Layne didn't get up a sweat after joining the Pittsburgh Steelers Tuesday before learning he would start against the Philadelphia Eagles Sunday.

And Tobin Rote had hardly been named Detroit's No. 1 quarterback, following the trade of Layne to the Steelers, before he pulled a thigh muscle.

"Sure the trade surprised me," Layne told newsmen as he went through his first workout in a Steeler uniform. "But I'm happy to be back with Coach Buddy Parker."

Layne, who played under Parker at Detroit and obtained in exchange for Earl Morrill, added that "I can help the Steelers," who have dropped their first two games.

Ice packs were applied to Rote's injury, suffered in Tuesday's workout, and it is expected that he will be able to see some action against the Los Angeles Rams Sunday. It was the first muscle injury Rote suffered in all his years of football.

Morrill worked long and hard at learning the plays after reporting to Detroit during the day.

MORE FOOTBALL—The New York Giants asked waivers on reserve quarterback Tom Dubinski, making room for rookie lineman Melwood (Bus) Guy, formerly of Duke. . . . The Army-Air Force Academy football game slated for Michie Stadium on Oct. 31, 1958, will be the first and probably the last between the two schools. Army coach Earl Blaik was the authority who made the observation.

RACING—Clem will get the sternest test of his career when he packs topweight of 126 pounds in the mile and a half, $50,000-added Manhattan Handicap at Belmont Wednesday.

BASEBALL—The St. Louis Cardinals traded pitcher Billy Muffett, catcher Hobie Landrith and infielder Beany Valenzuela to San Francisco for Ernie Broglio and Marv Grissom. Righthander Broglio had an 8-1 record for Phoenix and a 9-3 chart for Montreal in 1957. He will make an exhibition tour to Japan with his new club. . . . The Cards announced they will not operate a Class AA franchise in Houston next year. The move permits the Cards to seek a AAA franchise. If the Texas League refuses the request, the Cardinals will offer the Houston franchise for sale.

A rumor that the Australian runner wants to study at the university broke the cloistered calm of the famed English University like a starter's gun. A misunderstanding over cross-country ski plans for the 1960 Olympic Winter Games at Squaw Valley was blamed for Stockholm reports that some Scandinavians are unhappy over the way things are going.

BOB JONES: GOLF TODAY IS TOO EASY

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (UPI)—Bobby Jones said Tuesday that American golfers "have it too easy."

The 56-year-old golfing immortal told a press conference that the American trend to "sculpture" the greens and fairways reduced the skill required by the game during his own playing days.

While conceding that the golfers of today are more skillful than back in 1930 when he scored his famous "grand slam," Jones said:

"It's getting so golfers can wind up with a tight fairway lie and not have to worry. The greens are so 'holding' they make approach shots look easy."

Jones said he noticed since his arrival here that even St. Andrews was affected by the trend. He observed that the trees have been moved back on the fifth, sixth and 14th holes of the old course while the sixth green—one of his favorites—was altered and "now is too easy."

amateur in the 1954 and 1957 opens. He had a 73 on the old course in a great round Tuesday, giving his approaches against the pin in the face of a gale that swept in from the North Sea.

Oklahoma's Charlie Coe, the 140-pound veteran who took the American Amateur in 1949 and won it again this year, has been delighting the Scottish crowds in practice play.

Dr. Frank Taylor, a Pomona, Calif., dentist who reached the American Amateur final last year, has been under a handicap here. His clubs and golf shoes went away in transit and are not due here until Wednesday.

Bill Hyndman of Philadelphia, a tall, affable insurance broker who has reached golfing heights at the age of 42, is in love with St. Andrews. After a wretched morning round, he tore the course apart with a blazing 34 after lunch.

Ed Norris was elected president of the Atlanta Baseball Umpires Assn. Wednesday. John Butts was elected vice-president. John Lockerman was chosen umpire-in-chief and Hoyle Dye secretary-treasurer and booking agent.

KEGLERS CORNER

BEN DOWNS GOES FOR STRIKES, AND LIKES 'EM, TOO

By PAUL ATKINSON
Atlanta Cracker outfielder Ben Downs is still going for strikes . . . but he's doing it now on the city's bowling lanes.

Downs, a husky 28-year-old Detroit, Mich., native, carries an average of "somewhere between 190 and 195." He ranks second in the Southern Bowler Singles standings with 14.37 Petersen Points, and is third in the strong Atlanta Major Traveling League with a 187.1 average.

"Have I had a 300 game?" Downs repeated a question. "No, but I did come up with three 279s."

"You know, bowling's my first love. I started at it when I was 16 in Detroit. Oddly, I'm working now for Mr. Steve Johns, who was bowling lane proprietor where I first started. He's in the construction business now."

"One thing that has hurt my bowling is a bad finger. I got it when I broke into baseball as a catcher. That beating you take behind the plate doesn't do your hands any good."

"I really enjoy bowling. The facilities in Atlanta are picking up. The interest here is fine." Does he have hopes of turning "pro" in bowling? "Well," he laughed, "I would . . . if I was improving my average any. But I'm carrying about the same average now I had when I first started. One thing that has hurt me has been the overlapping of the bowling and baseball seasons. You have to keep at bowling, just as you do baseball."

So the 23-homer hitting Downs, who swung a .297 bat after coming to Atlanta from Little Rock, is getting his share of strikes in bowling, too.

"HOW I STARTED BOWLING": Spann Miller, insurance agent—"I remember the first day I started bowling. It was in Kansas City on a trip and I had only a 50-cent allowance. Bowling fit into my budget, so I went in and bowled; I really got a kick out of it now."

NOTEBOOKING: The Constitution institutes a five-day (Monday through Friday) feature by Billy Sixty starting Monday. Sixty is a well-known bowler who'll give helpful hints on how to improve your game. Watch for it Monday. . . . Milt Raymer, the Junior Bowling Congress instructor, will be at Bowl-O-Matic Saturday morning at 10 to give instructions to all interested in becoming bowling instructors in the JBC program. Expected in are people from Alabama, southern Tennessee and Georgia. Local people who plan to attend are asked to contact Arnie Arnston, GL 7-4956, so he can get a general idea about how many will show. . . . Oddities Dept.: Ben Downs came up with this combination Monday night—the 5, 7 and 10 still standing. No, he didn't make 'em all; just the 7. "First time it's ever happened," he said, "and I hope it's the last." . . . Leaders in the O'Neil's Sweeper Doubles Tournament that ends Sunday. Men's—Joe Pecora and Guy Bell, 1,253; Bud Workman and Forrest Hall, 1,257; Women's—Mary Ryan and Clyde Brunt, 1,196; Mixed—Allene Farmer and Henry Land, 1,239, and Lu and Neil Roquemore, 1,225.

YOU GOTTA HAVE HEART: One of the most heart-warming experiences on the local bowling scene is a project undertaken by Bowl-O-Matic's Purkey Maska. She was approached recently by Northside School for Retarded Children to develop a bowling program among the students. The first try was Thursday, and Purkey reports a fine response by the children. "They took to the game beautifully," she said. "I was afraid that some of 'em wouldn't bowl; but, actually, I had a tough time getting them to quit for the day. All of the students that came participated. We hope to form a league for the school."

SCOREBOARDING: Top 10 in the Southern Bowler Singles looks this way—Charlie Hartridge, 14.48 Petersen points; Downs and Bill Ryan, 14.37; Bob Kerr, 14.21; Mac McDermott, 14.13; George Arnold, 14.04 with a high of 604; Ralph Brunt, 13.48; Gray Hammond, 13.28; Frank Hawkins, 13.15, and Gil Rayhill, 13.05. . . . With the Atlanta Major Men's Traveling League, these averages are best—Ed Holbrook, 200.2; Bob Mendelson, 189; Rayhill and Downs, 187.1; Ralph Brunt, 186.13; Guy Bell, 186.03; Herb Barker, 186.03, and Mac McDermott, 186. . . . In the JBC League No. 1, check these leaders: Dale Polzen, 161; Terry Wilch, 157, and Dick Gray, 153. . . . There's a new league a-hopin'. Any men unattached to leagues and who would like to join one are asked to be at the Bowl-O-Matic Friday at 8 p.m. to meet with Atlanta Bowling Assn. officials on the desirability of creating one. . . . A new name, but some old faces: The Atlanta Ladies Bowling League is now the Broadview Bowlerettes. Louise Buellman had a 516; Lois Arnston, a 502, and Martha McClain, a 496 for high scores over the week. . . . Sam Hawkins' 183 average and 233 handicap single game were the most in the Broadview Tenpin League. . . . Reid Payton's scratch series of 565 and Mel Novak's 220 individual were highs in the Blue-Gray League. . . . W. L. Hoerner's 232 and 555 topped the Lockheed Management League. . . . Lon Schneider's three-game scratch series of 574 led the Knights of Columbus leaguers, and John Lengyel's 232 was individually best.

Cotton, Ray Fight on TV

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Light heavyweight Eddie Cotton, who quit the ring in 1956 because of his slow progress, takes on Sonny Ray Wednesday night in a scheduled 10-round bout at Fairgrounds Coliseum.

It will be the first outing of the year for Cotton, a rugged campaigner with a record of 35-7-1 in almost 11 years of scrapping. One of his few fights in 1957 was a losing decision to Archie Moore.

"Rather than have Cotton fighting for peanuts," said trainer Lou Gross, "we're trying to pick our fights for him, to get bouts where, if he wins, he can move along."

"The fight with Ray is one of those fights."

The 23-year-old Ray, only man ever to whip light heavyweight contender Jesse Bowdry—he did it three times, twice by a knockout—has an 18-5 record.

Ray, who fights out of Chicago, is expected to weigh about 171 pounds, same as his Seattle opponent, for the nationally televised (ABC) bout. It will be scored on the five-point system.

es to him. And he'll play Saturday."

Murray, who said Sime's job isn't one that requires much practice, stated "it's a matter of getting into position to catch a forward pass."

"This gives us an opportunity to use a man who has tremendous qualifications for one position. Sime has a great pair of hands and can catch passes. We think he will be an asset to us."

And Sime won't be used strictly as a decoy.

"If Sime doesn't feel that he can be a bona fide football player, he won't stay out," Murray said, after explaining the .093 100-yard dash man would be called on to block on several plays.

Sime won't play on defense and he won't enter the huddle. His appearance in the lineup will be to take two defensive men out of the play.

Sime worked out for the first time Tuesday with the Blue Devils. He's in good physical condition, although about 10 pounds above his 190-pound sprinting weight.

Brave Spahn To Hurl Sixth Game; Yanks Mull Ford, Larsen, Ditmar

holding them scoreless for a total of six innings in two games.

Stengel said he wasn't surprised to hear Spahn would pitch. "After all he's done pretty good against us, hasn't he?" Stengel remarked.

Casey did say before the workout that Elston Howard, whose catch saved Bob Turley in Monday's game, would be in left field and Yogi Berra would catch.

The decision to pitch Spahn was announced after a clubhouse meeting that lasted only three minutes. All Haney needed was a chance to ask Spahn if he was ready.

"I had Spahn in mind all along," said Haney. "But I didn't know for sure until I talked to him."

Spahn, who won the 10-inning opener last Wednesday 4-3 and then shut out the Yanks with two hits 3-0 Sunday, could match the 1957 feat of his roommate, Burdette, if he could win this one. Only seven pitchers have won three or more games in a best-of-seven Series. The last left-hander was St. Louis' Harry Brecheen against the Boston Red Sox in 1946 and his third was in relief.

"My arm feels loose," said Spahn as he took the field for the workout under overcast skies. It was much warmer, however, than it was Monday in New York. The temperature at midday was 71 degrees, with showers predicted. The forecast for Wednesday was partly cloudy and mild with a high in the 70s.

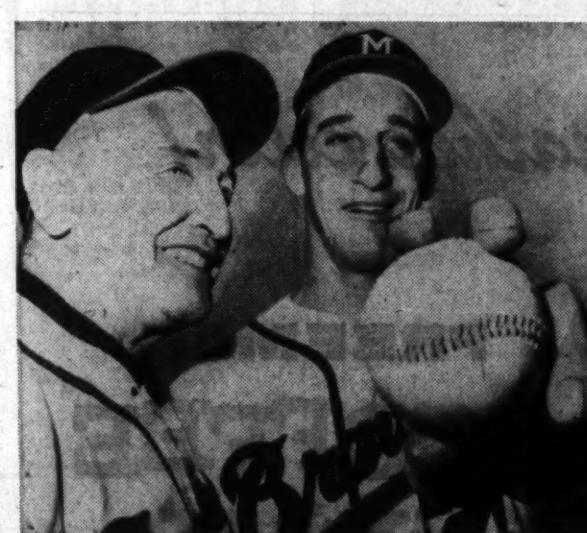

Spahn said he didn't think he would be affected by the short rest. "I had my stuff Sunday. It was a fairly easy game for me. The tough ones are when you lose or have to struggle. But I can't remember when I pitched with only two days rest."

Against a right-hander, Haney will play Bill Bruton in center and Frank Torre on first base. Andy Pafko and Joe Adcock sit out against the righties.

If Stengel can skin through Wednesday's game with Larsen, Ditmar and perhaps Ryne Duren and Johnny Kucks too, he will have a rested Whitey Ford and Turley, for a seventh game.

Big money rides on each pitch as they head into the sixth game. The winners will split about $133,000 and the losers about $208,000 to say nothing of the endorsement cash and extra money for winter appearances by the world champions.

Burton, more respected as a defensive man than a dangerous hitter, leads both clubs with a .500 average. Although he has started only three times, he has appeared in all five games.

Del Crandall is having an excellent Series, hitting .294 and doing a fine job behind the plate. However, he has struck out six times. Hank Aaron (.263) also has to drive in a run.

Eddie Mathews, the most feared long distance slugger in the Milwaukee line-up, has been disappointing with a .211 average. His nine strikeouts already tie Jim Bottomley's record for a six-game Series. The all-time high for any length Series is 10.

Red Schoendienst at .238, Pafko at .286 and Wes Covington at .278 sport respectable averages. Johnny Logan is playing good ball at short but has only three hits and a .158 mark. Neither of the platooning first basemen, Adcock or Torre, has done much with the bat.

On the Yankee side the big man is Hank Bauer who hit safely through 17 Series games before he finally was stopped. The ex-Marine is batting .381 with eight hits, high for the Series. He has three homers and seven runs batted in to top both clubs in power.

Mickey Mantle has pulled his average up to .333. His three runs batted in came on a pair of homers off Lew Burdette in the game the Yanks lost 13-5. Gil McDougald's excellent second base play and his .278 average scoff at the Milwaukee scouting report that he is over the hill.

Until Berra doubled off Burdette in Monday's big sixth inning, the squat catcher hadn't driven in a run. He still has only one RBI and a sad .158 average although he has played more Series games, 59, than any other man, is tied for most Series hits by any individual and leads in total bases.

Tony Kubek has been shackled by a horrible slump. His only hit in 17 trips was an in-field single and he is batting .059. Bill Skowron also is below par at .211 and the platooning third basemen have not added much to the attack. Jerry Lumpe, who plays against right-handed pitching is batting .250 and Andy Carey and Bobby Richardson, who play against left-handers, are still looking for their first hit.

Norm Siebern, a .300 hitter in his first full season as a Yankee regular, is way down at .125, haunted by the memory of his nightmare afternoon in left field Sunday. Howard still hasn't hit in 10 trips but Stengel forgave that when he made the diving belly-flopper catch on Red Schoendienst to start a rally-killing double play Monday.

As a club the Braves are hitting .260 and the Yanks .196.

Tottering Businesses Get Arm To Lean On

By BOB WILLIMON

Like so many small businessmen faced with possible bankruptcy, John didn't know that there's a "fire department" that specializes in heading off such unpleasant situations.

Fortunately, somebody else called the "firemen."

Result: John's promising small Atlanta area manufacturing plant—only "weeks away from almost certain bankruptcy" two years ago—not only has been saved but has doubled in size and is now paying 42 employees more than $150,000 a year in wages. The growth potential is even brighter.

John's business and others like it—if left to their own devices—would have folded. The creditors would have lost a large part of their money and the owners all of theirs.

The service furnished John is available to all businessmen, Hodgkins said. GACM charges 5 per cent of all monies collected for its clients—usually the suppliers—for its services.

Fourth in a series

FULL-TIME STAFF

The "fire department" in this case was the 29-man full-time staff of the Georgia Association of Credit Men, Inc. The staff, operated on a $217,000-a-year budget by 500 GACM firms, is a facility of the National Association of Credit Men, which has but one broad aim—to achieve for its members maximum profitable sales distribution.

Which means, in John's case, that GACM could best serve its sponsors by keeping him in business. Thus, not only were John's suppliers able to recoup their outstanding interest in his firm in the form of debt; they were also able to retain and increase his business as a customer—the primary aim.

JOHN FAILED

What GACM did for John was what John failed to do for himself. It brought John and his creditors together for a "sit down" session and worked out a plan of survival acceptable to all.

In preparation for the session, requested by the small firm's creditors, GACM contacted John and obtained permission for a task force of the organization's accountants to go over the company's books and find out why the firm was not ticking. With this information, GACM went into the meeting with a good idea of what needed to be done.

CAPITAL LACK

John, whose basic fault was going into business with inadequate capital, made such a convincing expression of faith in the future of the business at the session that his creditors dropped seven pending court claims.

Moreover—on the strength of his putting up as security some $47,000 in real estate that he owned but was unable to sell in order to br himself out of debt—the creditors agreed to double their credit investment in his business.

As figured out by GACM executive manager Jack C. Hodgkins Jr., John came out of the meeting with a debt limit of some $64,000. Covering this amount was the real estate and a business with assets of $47,000.

SIMILAR CASES

GACM's files contain numerous similar cases. The point of the organization's operations is that

New Home Increase Is Predicted

Average Price
Of $14,450 Seen

(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.)
SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—The nation's home builders expect to produce about 10 per cent more houses in 1958 than last year, with emphasis on a price range about 4 per cent under 1957.

This outlook was offered here Tuesday by Nels G. Severin, president of the National Association of Home Builders. But Severin said he is "very apprehensive" about the prospect of a return to a "tight" mortgage money period.

Present figures indicate, he said, that this year's production of new dwelling units will fall short of 1,100,000. In 1957, only 989,000 units were built at a median sales price of $15,100. The median 1958 price tag probably will be about $14,450.

The spokesman commented that the availability of mortgage money during recent months has brought builders' financing costs down enough to affect sales prices.

But Severin warned that the financing sunshine may not be here to stay. The clouds of money scarcity are gathering and substantial discounts are once again being asked for government-backed home loans.

Dodge Refines Motor To Lower Fuel Costs

New styling designed to enhance eye appeal mark the 1959 Dodge cars to be introduced Friday, Oct. 10.

Featuring front end changes are arched headlight eyebrows that curve inward and downward to the front grille. At the rear new taillights are patterned after jet tubes. Chrome moldings are shaped to permit side as well as rear visibility of the taillight. The flaring rear fins ride atop the taillights.

Emphasizing massive front-end appearance are horizontal bars set off by a grille screen of anodized aluminum. A sculptured roof with a raised back section marks several hardtop models.

Dodge announced a new V-8 engine and refinements in other power plants, designed to improve fuel economy. The engines and their power trains, it reported, are designed for use with so-called regular gasoline.

Engines range from 135 to 350 horsepower. New options include swing-out, swivel front seats, self-dimming rear view mirror, automatic headlight dimmer and low-pressure tires, using 18 to 18 pounds pressure compared with 22-24 pounds in regular tires.

The 1959 Dodge will go on display in Atlanta Friday at Lander Motors, Inc., 25 North Ave., NE; Tom Smith Motors, 3483 Peachtree Rd., NE; Decatur Motors, Inc., 125 W. Ponce de Leon Ave., Decatur, and Westbrook Motors, 228 N. Main St., East Point.

Sommers To Unveil Plymouth Oct. 16

Harry Sommers, Inc., 446 Spring St., NW, will bring among the Atlanta area dealers to introduce the 1959 Plymouth on Thursday, Oct. 16.

Sommers, one of the nation's pioneer Chrysler-Plymouth dealers, was inadvertently omitted from the list of franchised Plymouth dealers published in Tuesday's Constitution.

Late Rally Puts Market on High

Over All News Encouraging; Government Bonds Recover

NEW YORK (AP)—A late rally pulled an irregularly lower stock market to the upside and sent the list to its sixth record high in seven sessions.

The market repeated a pattern displayed in a sustained advance to a new peak after another buyers rushed in when stock prices began to show some signs of weakness but no disposition to decline sharply.

MIXED AT START

The market was mixed at the start and the ticker tape ran behind transactions for five minutes in the early rush to take profits and switch stocks.

The uneven tone prevailed until late afternoon when the rise began, slowly at first, then with increasing tempo that caused a late taper in the final minutes.

Overall business news continued encouraging. Recovery in U.S. government bonds was a heartening sign. Interest in common stocks continued unabated, as evidence by an expanded offering of New Wellington equity fund shares.

Final gains ran from fractions to 2 points and more among key stocks. High-priced international business machines rose 2 1/2 to a new high of 439, passing another ultra-blue chip, Rohm & Haas, which gained 6 to 423 1/2. The latter surged ahead of IBM Monday.

A GOOD RIDE
Cheaper stocks also got a good ride, showing the combination of solid investment buying and speculative interest.

Based on the rise in the Associated Press average, the quoted value of stocks rose an estimated one billion dollars.

American Stock Exchange prices were generally higher on volume of 1,320,000 shares compared with 1,130,000 Monday.

Corporate bonds milled unevenly in quiet dealings.
